An enthusiastic and appreciative audience filled the Pioneer Methodist church Saturday evening to hear the highly polished and brilliant College of the Pacific a cappella choir in concert.

Under the direction of J. Russell Bodley, head of the theory and composition department of the college's school of music, the selections were beautifully executed and all voices of the choir were lovely. Outstanding were all the soloists and a composition, "The Luckless Fisherman" by Edelmann drew much applause. The composer is a member of the a cappella choir.
