Congress Action Sought By Group For Timber Work

Speaking before the Coquille Chamber of Commerce Tuesday, Ross Youngblood, district forester, told the civic group that plans for forest conservation and the marketing of government timber will have to be cut back from the original estimate for the fiscal year 1950 unless congress raises the amount of money allocated for this work.

The original estimate, as presented by the regional office of the Bureau of Land Management was cut from two and one-half millions of dollars to $817,000 by the president's budget and to $500,000 by the house of representatives.

It is contended by the Bureau that the figure set by the president is an absolute minimum for the proper administration of the public lands under its jurisdiction. Youngblood pointed out that $268,000 is required for fire control alone.

In an effort to have the president's budget of $817,000 restored by the Congress, the local advisory board of the Coos Bay district of the Bureau of Land Management, has written a letter to United States Senator Guy Cordon setting forth the facts and requesting his aid when the matter is brought before the legislature at the next session.

After listening to the district forester's detailed account of proposed budget expenditures and the prospective lay-off of one-third of the Bureau's regional personnel if more funds are not made available, the Coquille Chamber voted to give their full support to the letter as written by the local advisory board to Senator Guy Cordon.

Social Security Protects Children

Two plans for safeguarding the security of America's children are included in the U. S. Social Security Act, according to Paul F. Johnson, manager of the Eugene office of the Social Security administration.

Both plans provide regular cash income when other income is cut off, and both are planned to strengthen the family by making it easier for children to remain in their homes. However, they differ in the way they operate, Johnson said. One is an insurance plan under which a worker earns rights to insurance benefits for his family when he dies or retires after reaching age 65. The other is an assistance plan called Aid to Dependent Children, under which payments are made for children in need.

Benefits under the old-age and survivors insurance system are paid as monthly insurance payments to children whose fathers die at any age, and to children whose fathers received old-age insurance benefits. To be eligible, the father must work a certain time on jobs covered by the Social Security act. The period varies from a year and one-half to ten years, depending upon when the worker was born and when he dies or retires. The benefit amount is based on the worker's earnings under social security.

For the purpose of taking claims and giving other assistance and advice regarding the old-age and survivors insurance program, William R. Pierron, field representative of the Eugene office will be in Coquille at the city hall, on Wednesday, April 27, between the hours of 8:30 a. m. and noon.
