FARMERS SEE "KNOW-HOW"

Field Day Draws Many To See Operation Of Field Forage Harvesters

Five different makes of forage harvesters were seen in operation at a grass silage field day held at the Dewey Miller farm near Broadbent on Friday, May 26. The program was arranged by M. G. Huber, agricultural engineering specialist at Oregon State college, working in co-operation with George Jenkins, county agricultural agent. Lunch was served at noon by members of the Broadbent Parent Teachers' association.

Equipment including the forage harvesters, wagons for hauling the chopped material from the field to the silo, and a blower for blowing the material into the silo were distributed by J. A. Freeman and Son, dealers in farm implements at Portland.

The New Holland forage harvester and a special built wagon for mechanically unloading chopped material were demonstrated by R. M. Wade & Co. of Portland, working in cooperation with the Tower Motor Co. in Coos Bay, local agent for this equipment.

The Gehl harvester, blower and wagons, with unloading devices were shown by the Cascade Supply of Portland and Wayne Babcock of Broadbent, local dealer for this equipment.

The John Deere forage harvester was demonstrated by Ward & Lundy of Coquille and a representative of the John Deere Plow Co. in Portland.

A bearcat harvester was displayed by Wm. Bell, local distributor for this equipment located at Myrtle Point.

All machines were demonstrated in a heavy stand of barley peas and grass located in a field near the silo on this farm. Each machine picked up the forage from the windrow, chopped it, and blew it into wagons or trailers which haul it to the silo. Various types of unloading equipment were used to move the chopped material to the blower and into the silo.

The new forage harvesters and the equipment which goes with them takes most of the hand labor out of the silo filling job and makes it possible to handle forage in this manner cheaper, it was stated at the meeting by representatives of various companies.

In summarizing the meeting Huber explained that the meeting was arranged to provide an opportunity for Coos county farmers to see the different equipment in operation and to encourage this method of storing forage on the farm for winter use.

Meet Responsibilities Squarely, Powers Graduates Told By St. James' Rector

Failure to meet responsibilities squarely is the prime reason for mankind's difficulties, Father Robert Lessing, rector of St. James' Episcopal church in Coquille told the graduating classes of Powers high school and Powers elementary school last Friday evening.

"Youth today is entering the most interesting and at the same time the most confusing period in our history," Father Lessing stated. "It is a time of paradoxes with greater opportunities available in a world dedicated to the creation and increased emphasis on destructive weapons."

"Man holds the decisions for scientific achievement," Father Lessing continued, "whether it is to be for good or evil. The world belongs to our youth, and the decision remains with you. Your world is just beginning with this commencement and your future should be dedicated to the fulfillment of the brotherhood of mankind, that ultimate destiny of mankind. But remember, the goals of mankind, happiness, peace and security, are spiritual attainments and only by identifying yourselves to the One who makes the brotherhood of mankind a reality instead of a dream can we ever hope to reach the goal."

Musical interludes were offered by the Powers high school band under the direction of Mr. R. B. Nicklaus, principal of the Powers high school.

Donald Gene Hull received a scholarship award for outstanding work during his high school career when the class received diplomas from Mrs. Kenneth Rolfe, member of the school board.

Awards were also given for perfect attendance to Joyce Watson, Carmen Reeves, Lincoln Magill, Gary Modrock, Charles McKenzie, Ivan Frye, Edmon Magill and Mary Magill.

Honorable mention awards for outstanding scholastic achievement were given to Gary Brady, Arlene Grove, Robert McMahon, Edward Magill, Dean Warner, Richard Spitznass, Madelon McMahon, Loretta Moore, Mary Magill and Donald Edward Hull.
