

Q. How are deferments worked out?
 A. Local draft boards defer men on the basis of their previous military service, their dependents, and their occupation. These deferments are based on answers to questionnaires sent out to all registrants.
 Q. Is there an appeal from the local board decision on classification?
 A. Yes. If any man feels the board has not acted properly in placing him in any classification, he can appeal within 10 days to an appeal board. There is at least one appeal board in each state, quite often two or more. The local boards will give the proper forms and addresses for appeals.

Q. Where do 18-year olds fit into the picture?
 A. They must register when they become 18. However, they are not liable for military service for at least one year.
 Q. What are the provisions for getting a draftee his old job back?
 A. With reasonable limits all employers are required to give draftees their old jobs back without loss of seniority after they are honorably discharged.
 Q. Are college students eligible for drafting?
 A. Any student doing satisfactory work in a college or university or the equivalent may finish his school year before being drafted.
 Q. Are ministers or ministerial students liable for military service?

 A. No.
 Q. How about high school students?
 A. High school students may continue in school until they graduate or until they reach the age of 20 whichever comes first.
 Q. What about the national guard?
 A. So far, no decision has been made to call the guard into service. Guard members are not subject to the draft.
 Q. Will reserve officers and men be called for active duty?
 A. Apparently sole officers will help to train the draftees. It was not known whether they will be called by units or individuals. The military hopes some reserves will step forward without being called.

Lumbermen's association announced today.
 During the first half of 1956, lumber shipments of 5,313,385,000 board feet set an all-time record for this region, Simpson said. A freight car shortage in Oregon, starting three months ago and becoming critical during June, hampered mills, cutting down shipments.
 Every fir mill west of the Cascades in Oregon, Washington and California, not closed by flood waters or strikes, was reported operating at capacity to supply lumber for the greatest housing boom in the nation's history.
 The weekly average of West Coast lumber production in June was 206,077,000 b. f. or 125.6 per cent of the 1945-1949 average. Orders averaged 212,197,000 b. f.; Shipments 219,472,000 b. f.; Weekly averages for May were: Production 221,980,000 (135.3 per cent of the 1945-1949 average); Orders 207,128,000 b. f.; Shipments 231,312,000 b. f.
 Twenty-six weeks of 1956 cumulative: Twenty-six weeks of 1949, 4,844,266,000 b. f.; Twenty-six weeks of 1948, 4,840,000.
 Orders for twenty-six weeks of 1956 breakdown as follows: Rail 3,72,968,000 b. f.; Truck 238,543,000 b. f.; Domestic Cargo 1,262,440,000 b. f.; Export 92,931,000 b. f.; Local 334,217,000 b. f.
 The industry's unfilled order file stood at 857,860,000 b. f. at the end of June; Gross Stocks at 594,367,000 b. f.

Short In Distance, But Long In Time
 In a drive of 20 blocks, a smiling San Diego couple yesterday traveled 60 years back over memory's road.
 The trip took Mr. and Mrs. Alva A. Nosler, of 366 Twenty-first St., to 2860 Newton Ave. There, hand in hand, they stood before the house in which they were married June 19, 1890.
 "Look, Alva," said Mrs. Alice Nosler, 79, to her husband. "It's not much different, is it?"
 "Well, there's some new paint and shingles, but, I guess we've changed a little, too" replied Nosler, 83.
 The sturdy two-story house in which Alice Colton became a bride was built by her father, A. C. Colton, who brought his family to San Diego in 1884 from Virginia City, Nev.
 Nosler, born in Des Moines, came to San Diego in 1886. In the years since his marriage, he not only watched San Diego's population shift and grow but had a hand in the moving. In 1909, he founded the Pacific Transfer, Van & Truck company, which he turned over to his sons when he retired in 1946.

Two of Mr. and Mrs. Nosler's three children are Harry W. and Alva A. Nosler Jr. A third son, Arthur, died last February.
 The couple also has four granddaughters, three great-grandsons. And most of them will be in the throng of relatives and friends who Sunday afternoon will gather at an open house at the Nosler home.
 (Editor's Note—Mr. and Mrs. Alva Nosler, subject for the story reprinted, herewith from a San Diego newspaper, are well known in Coquille and Coos county.)

Bangs Disease Program Set Up Same As That During Past Two Years

Testing of cattle in Coos county for tuberculosis and brucellosis (Bang's disease) will be handled on about the same basis during the fiscal year starting this month as during the past two years, it was announced this week by L. D. Felsheim, county judge.
 The basis for the testing program is a state law which provides that all dairy cattle over six months old, and all beef cattle over six months old which are located on the same or adjoining farms with dairy cattle, must be tested at least once annually and more frequently where disease is found. The purpose as stated is to maintain a more profitable dairy industry, and to protect the public health.
 Continuing as during the past two years, each veterinarian in the county will serve as county veterinarian and be responsible for the testing program for a certain part of the county. The line between the areas served by the different veterinarians will be the same as last year except for two changes which are being made this year to more nearly equalize the number of cattle handled by each veterinarian.
 The area north of Coos Bay will be transferred from Dr. C. C. Werth to Drs. Bennett, Hanawalt and Lucas; and the area along the South Fork of the Coquille river from Broadbent to Powers and vicinity and the Dement Creek Road from Dr. R. N. Crawford to Drs. Bennett, Hanawalt and Lucas to be handled by Dr. Lucas who will be located in Myrtle Point.
 Commenting further on the testing program, Judge Felsheim stated that the county court and other members of the budget committee, after checking reports made by the county veterinarians, feel that reasonable progress has been made during the past two years. However, after discussing the matter with veterinarians and many dairymen the court is convinced that further progress, and reasonable protection to the dairy industry, and to public health, will require greater care along some lines, both by dairymen and by county veterinarians.

 Judge Felsheim said that George Jenkins, county agricultural agent, has been asked to continue serving as coordinator, helping with the organization of the work and maintaining a county file of testing records.
 Each veterinarian who serves as county veterinarian will be asked to cooperate by carefully processing all forms and supplying all information needed in order that better county records may be kept. Proper disinfection of premises following removal of diseased cattle will be a requirement before indemnity will be approved, and diseased herds will be kept under quarantine to prevent the movement of diseased and exposed cattle.
 "We are asking all veterinarians to refrain from issuing health certificates for the movement of diseased or questionable cattle and to use all other precautions to give maximum protection to clean herd. If these things are done and the dairymen will give full cooperation in disease-control measures we can expect continued progress in eradicating disease," the judge concluded.

Bonney Barn Burns

A fire, which caused plenty of excitement, and clouds of black smoke, but little actual damage, destroyed an old barn located at the end of South Coulter street late Tuesday afternoon. The building, owned by Luckey Bonney, contained very little hay and no stock.
 A little over an hour later the fire alarm rang a second time and the fire department was called to the Ulett apartments to extinguish a roof blaze. The fire was out of the city limits so without the fire truck, the fire department boys tore off some shingles, formed a bucket brigade and put out the fire with the aid of a garden hose.
