Area Resources Being Discussed At Land Meeting

Resource development problems of Southwest Oregon will be highlighted at the monthly meeting of the Pacific Northwest Field Committee of the department of the Interior to be held in Coos Bay, today and tomorrow, advises R. F. Bessey, its chairman.

Subjects to be covered will include land, forests, grazing, minerals, water supply, power development, recreation and other programs in which the Department has a direct interest.

"Southwestern Oregon is the fastest-growing area in a fast-growing state and is faced with many interesting problems," said Mr. Bessey.

To acquaint the committee with such problems and the activities of the Bureau of Land Management of the department, Daniel L. Goldy, regional administrator, has arranged area tours. One will cover sustained yield logging operations on the public domain and the relation of these operations to other land and water problems including grazing, water-shed management, and recreation.

Close utilization of forest products will be shown during a visit to the Evans Products company. The Bureau of Land Management is cooperating with a number of Southern Oregon communities to build up payrolls through more intensive manufacture of lumber products, Mr. Goldy said.

A feature of the meeting will be a luncheon on Friday, July 14, with representatives of the chambers of commerce of Coos Bay, North Bend, and Coquille.

The Pacific Northwest Field committee is composed of top regional representatives of the Department's eight agencies (the bureau of Reclamation, Land Management, Indian Affairs, and Mines; Bonneville Power Administration; Fish and Wildlife and National Park services; and Geological Survey) and the office of the secretary. It meets monthly in order that the eight bureaus may exchange views and keep their programs in line with each other. Occasional meetings are held in local areas to promote undertaking of regional problems and needs.
