Sunday School Annex Of Powers Church Dedicated At Ceremony Held January 14

Dedication of the Sunday school annex at the Open Bible Church in Powers was an outstanding event of Monday evening, January 18.

The service began with a no-host potluck dinner served in the new Fellowship room of the annex. Approximately 150 attended the dinner. The tables were decorated with spring greenery. It was a big event for those who have worked and looked forward to the dedication since the annex was first started a year and a half ago.

A program of dedication was given as all gathered around the tables. Homer L. Bagley, pastor of the local church, introduced Max Fisk, pastor of Calvary Temple at Springfield, Oregon, who acted as Master of Ceremonies.

Rev. Fisk was instrumental in starting the annex, inasmuch as he drew the plans for it, when Rev. Bagley indicated the need of such a building.

Rev. Harvey C. Klapstein, president of Bible Standard Institute, was introduced, and played a violin solo, "Onward Christian Soldiers" accompanied by Mrs. Ruth Washington on the accordion.

Miss Synthia Meyers, registrar of Bible Standard Institute of Eugene, Oregon, was introduced. Miss Meyers is a former Powers girl. She spoke briefly on the growth of the church, comparing the old and the new.

Meetings will be held at 8 p.m. on the third Friday of each month in Coquille. The place of the meetings will be announced later.

Sewer Line Site Questioned

Paul Bany, resident of Sanford Heights, appeared before the city council Monday night asking why the new sewer line would not serve his basement lavatory and washing room.

He was told the extra cost would be $2,500 and that the council felt it was too high a sum to assess against his and other property.

City Engineer Mike Huddleston said he had questioned all other people with basements and had found that they did not need a sewer low enough to serve their basements as they had no water in them.

Bany will have service however, for his main floor.
