Red Cross Notes.

Everything is progressing nicely at headquarters. The ladies are becoming quite expert at the difficult task of making pajamas according to specifications. Thirty suits are now completed. However, there are various other articles to be made which are easy enough for amateurs to attempt, and every lady is urged to lay aside her home duties one afternoon each week and join the workers. You are needed, and if you feel timid about making the complicated things, come anyway and help with the simple bed socks.

The yarn for knitting has not yet arrived at Marshfield, and until it comes the ladies are urged to make surgeon sponges and wash cloths for hospital use. These are knit from inexpensive cotton and are good practice for beginning and are much needed. This work can be done at home at odd moments.

The Rebekah lodge donated $10 to the Red Cross fund.

The Woman's Relief Corps of Coquille, has also given $10 to the local treasury.

On Monday afternoon Mrs. Fraedrick brought in a large cake in honor of her sister, Miss Ida C. Habeger's birthday. Miss Habeger, being a Red Cross nurse in France, could not be present at her party, but the guests took care of the birthday cake in a way that added two dollars to the general fund, as well as much enjoyment of the afternoon's work.

Mrs. Ruth Candlin has been appointed Superintendent of Sewing at the work rooms. It is largely due to Mrs. Candlin's faithful services and ability that the work of the chapter has progressed so nicely and the ladies are fortunate in having a superintendent who can and will devote as much time to the cause as Mrs. C. has.

At a recent meeting of the Red Cross association Mrs. C. J. Fuhrman was elected a member of the executive committee. The other members of the committee are as follows:

Clare Sherwood—Chairman.
Ruth Candlin—Vice Chairman.
Florence Barton—Secretary.
Marvin Lyons—Treasurer.
J. E. Norton—Chairman Military Relief committee.
O. C. Sanford—Chairman Financial committee.

To Argue in Supreme Court.

A. K. Peck, of Marshfield, went to Salem Wednesday to argue the case of the Myrtle Point Transportation Co. vs. the Port of Myrtle Point. The company was given judgment for $1,750 in the Circuit court here, and the case was appealed. They alleged that the Port Commission had the brush along the river slashed and allowed it to fall into the stream so that in the freshest a few years ago, a number of the company's boats were sunk.

Food Conservation Campaign.

The editor of the Sentinel is in receipt of the following communication from L. A. Liljeqvist, county chairman of the Food Conservation movement, telling about the pledge card campaign:

As you know the Pledge Card Campaign will take place between the 29th day of October and November 4th. The government desires to have these pledge cards signed up in the homes of the 22 millions families throughout the land in the United States. The government is also making a report of the families who refuse to sign. Any assistance that you can give in insuring the success of this campaign in Coos county will be appreciated by the United States Administration of food of which Mr. Hoover is the head. Three pure blooded Shetland ponies, the pick of the famous stock of Russell Hawkins, of Tillamook, will be given for the three best essays in the state of Oregon on the subject of "What we can do to help win the war." The classes which can compete for these prizes have been divided into ages, from 15 to 19 years inclusive, who are in high school or any private or parochial schools, from 11 to 14 years of age in the grades and from 10 years of age and under. Each county will be permitted only one essay in each class in the state contest. Each school district will be permitted but one essay only in its class in the contest within the district. In county schools where one teacher teaches all of the grades, this would mean that such school would have one contestant in each class covered. The County Superintendent in each is to certify that the county winner fulfills the qualifications laid down. Teachers and principals will certify to their own contestants in turn. In the contest in the individual school room, the teacher may either judge those essays herself, or obtain outside judges. As between schools it has been suggested that outside judges be obtained. The children should be gathering material from now on and essays had best be written in the campaign week, between October 28th and November 4th. Contesting essays for each district must be in the hands of the County School Superintendent by that date. The home card which is being distributed on food administration is valuable in furnishing material to the contestants.

Indicted Bootleggers Arrested.

Three of the twenty "blind indictments" of bootleggers and game law violators returned by the grand jury last week have been accounted for by the arrest of Fred Nieme, Eli Doyle and Andrew Erickson at the Bay for the illegal sale of liquor. Nieme and Doyle were brought over here and placed in jail. Erickson has put up a $1,000 bond for his appearance.

FAIRY GODMOTHER COMES.

lands for which has time and again made the computation, depended on how mad she was, it was evident enough that she is a genuine woman and something more than a mere tax collector.

Miss Hobbs, who wished to make her trip down to Gold Beach and pay Curry county its $5,000 of taxes and trimmings while the roads were good, decided to let the settlement with Coos county wait until her return Thursday, and continue her trip Wednesday morning. But she was good enough to let us feast our eyes on the warrant she held for Coos county, a piece of paper the size of an ordinary bank check, and not any better looking except that it was filled out with an order on the Treasurer of the United States signed by Secretary Wm. G. McAdoo and several other officials commanding the Treasurer to pay to the order of Miss Hobbs the sum of $139,708.54. It really wasn't as much satisfaction as we thought it would be to hold in our hands a piece of paper representing more money than any we had ever before got in our fingers.

The amount expected was, of course, $150.00, as the Sentinel has before stated; but the $12,000 due on lands to which grant was made and which are still unsold and unpatented will come a little later. It has been frequently questioned whether such lands are subject to taxation; but the law is plain that after final proof and before patent, taxes can be levied and Uncle Sam is going to give "Old Man Oregon" the benefit, and pay taxes on lands within the grant which have not been patented to the railroad company.

One lumber company is said to hold a large amount of these lands at a ridiculously low figure and has in the past "sworn off" the taxes on them because they are unpatented, but it will all come out in the wash, and Coos county will get her innings in the end.

Miss Hobbs commended the tax rolls prepared by the sheriff's office here in Coquille as being more free from errors than those of any other land grant county with the exception of Multnomah. But that doesn't spell so much for Multnomah as appears on the face of the statement. For Multnomah has only about a dozen tracts of O. & C. grant lands on its rolls while Coos has 225 sections, entire or fractional.

There were land grant counties, she said, in which the rolls had been made up by novices brought into office in the "clean sweep" wave last fall, where the errors were so general that it was easier to make out a new set of rolls than to correct the old ones.

In some counties all idea of getting any money on account of the O. & C. land grant taxes had long since been abandoned and no assessment had been made for the year 1915. In these cases, to remedy the omission, a sheriff's assessment for the neglected year was hurriedly made, for Uncle

Sam isn't trying to take advantage of children or idiots in making this distribution.

But at one time, she says, it did look as if Old Man Oregon was passing himself the buck (these are not Miss Hobbs' words, yet they convey her idea,) when the legislature passed or the records made it appear that the Egan bill had passed at Salem last winter, practically flying in the face of the United States Supreme court and affirming that these O. & C. lands still belonged to the Southern Pacific and should be assessed to it, the treasury officials were inclined to throw up their hands and have "done with the whole business." They said that if Oregon didn't want the government to pay these taxes and wanted to insist that Uncle Sam didn't know what he was doing, they saw no reason for going out of the way to help people so fatuous in their folly.

She told, too, the story of a deputy in the Clatsop sheriff's office, who took the short cut in figuring the taxes due that county and estimated the expense of a delinquent tax publication at $250 in round numbers. Preferring to be a little more exact, Miss Hobbs counted the lines and found that the amount was only a little over a hundred. Then the poor deputy fell into an agony of apprehension for fear that he would be sent to jail for trying to hold up Uncle Sam.

After listening to Miss Hobbs on the many features of the land grant tax business that she discussed, the opinion we formed years ago that she was strictly on the job in all she undertook received abundant confirmation.

Miss Hobbs made her schedule to Gold Beach and returned last night and exchanged that $139,708.54 for the required sheriff's receipts, and it is now in the strong box in the new building, which is of itself the strongest and biggest box in southern Oregon. She finished up her business last night and went out for Portland by the 6:12 train this morning.

Just how near this $139,000 and $60,000 odd received from the Boutin tract taxes for 1913 and 1914 came to being a round $200,000 any one can see. The amount available now for paying off the $240,000 outstanding county warrants cannot be much less than $160,000. And we are receiving intimations that the Southern Oregon, which owes about $270,000 more may settle without further legal proceedings as the outcome of the O. & C. case leaves scant prospects of its being able to evade any of its taxes.

And besides, we hear from the Bay the same old story about a company being organized to pay off the $90,000 or more of Kinney taxes and redeem those lands. Everything is apparently coming Coos county's way. And the man above all others who has worked long and painstakingly and intelligently and effectively to secure these results is former District Attorney L. A. Liljeqvist, who is now the special attorney for the county in these delinquent tax cases. He is still serving the people of Coos county just as earnestly and just as zealously as if they hadn't made the mistake of defeating him for re-election last fall.

No Question of Its Power.

Our government has just as much right and just as much power to conscript men's money as it has to take their services and risk their lives for our protection. It will not hesitate to do so either, if the voluntary subscriptions to our war loans are insufficient. Money in American government bonds is safer now than in any other investment that can possibly be made anywhere or in any other sort of property.

How Cheese is Manufactured.

The full cream, sweet milk is brought to the factory each morning, put in a tank, weighed, a sample taken of it and is run into vats. Most of the vats used here hold about six thousand pounds. After the milk is heated to about 86 degrees the coloring and rennet is added. The rennet is used to thicken the milk. After the milk is thick, two different knives are used to cut it in small cubes. These cubes are called curd. This is again heated, stirring it continually, until the curd has become quite firm. The liquid on the curd is called whey. The curd is left in the whey for an hour or more, when the curd is drained. The curd now mats together and is cut in slices about six inches thick, six inches wide and eighteen inches long. These pieces are cut and turned about every fifteen or twenty minutes to let out more whey. Soon it is ready to put in a mill that cuts the curd in cubes again. It is then salted. After the salt has dissolved, it is put in hoops made of heavy tin or steel. These hoops have bandages on the inner side of them and the curd is put inside of the bandage. These hoops are put in the press. The next morning the cheese is taken out and look very much as they do when you buy them.
