Attorney Liljeqvist Won in Judge Wolverton's Court at Portland Monday.

L. A. Liljeqvist, special attorney for Coos county in the pending tax cases against the Southern Oregon company and the Kinney properties, was over here yesterday. He had just returned from Portland where he appeared in Judge Wolverton's court last Monday to contest the suit of the Title Guarantee and Trust company of that city for an injunction to forbid Coos county to sell the Kinney properties for taxes.

Back in 1904, Mr. Liljeqvist says, Kinney, Sheehan and Wait, the holders of the title and the parties to whom the Kinney tract had been mortgaged, gave the Title Guarantee and Trust company their personal notes for $54,000 and conveyed the properties to J. K. Kolloch as Trustee. He was to sell the lots and pay a percentage of all the money received to the Trust company to liquidate these notes. So little was done in that direction, however, that the amount now owing that company on these notes is $90,000.

Subsequently R. B. Howard, of the Lead & Tilton Bank at Portland, was appointed receiver for the Title Guarantee and Trust company by the federal court and it is now claimed that Coos county had no right in foreclosing its tax liens on these properties without getting the consent of this federal court receiver. Hence this application for an injunction, of which the Title Guarantee & Trust company would be the real beneficiary.

To show cause why this injunction should not be granted Mr. Liljeqvist argued in the federal court all day Monday. The result was that Judge Wolverton denied the temporary injunction asked and gave him 30 days to file an answer for Coos county.

Mr. Liljeqvist says he expects Judge Shipworth will issue an order of sale in the case now, but that the case will not be ground through Judge Wolverton's court so that it can become effective in which less than six months. He entertains no doubt, however, that the county will win and that the Kinney tract will all go to him next year unless the holders of the mortgages against them pay the taxes, interest and penalties meantime.

This move, he thinks, is the last possible one to delay the sale. And of this he says that Mr. Howard, the receiver for the Title Guarantee and Trust company, in whose name the present suit is brought, has no recourse except to pay all taxes on properties in his control—which he certainly has never done in the Kinney case—nor does it seem clear that these properties have ever been in his control.

Seven Addresses Monday.

Mrs. Jennie Kemp, vice chairman of the Women's Committee of the State Council of National Defense and field agent of the federal Food Administration, who is on an extended itinerary, spoke in our city on Monday to seven interested audiences on food conservation and other matters of vital importance.

In the forenoon she spoke in the high school building, first to the high school and the eighth grade together, then to the seventh, sixth and fourth grades, separately, this being all the pupils in the building.

In the afternoon she spoke at more length in the City Hall and in the evening, she gave a ten minute talk between acts at the Scenic. The last talk was planned so late that it could not be much advertised.

Mrs. Kemp's addresses were full of ideas and information and she has a bright, piquant style, which is very attractive. All who heard her, from the little fourth graders up, declared that they "wouldn't have missed it for anything."

Back to His Ship.

Merton Tyrrell was given a very enjoyable farewell visit by his relatives and friends Wednesday evening, before leaving yesterday morning to rejoin his ship now in dry dock at the Navy Island navy yard. Merton graduated in our city high school in June 1916; and early this year enlisted in the navy. His ship had been awaiting for eight months in tropical waters and the barnacles and seaweed had accumulated at a great rate on her hull, some of the attached weeds being two feet long. He has a fifteen days' furlough, of which he was able to spend two at home.

The Commercial Club meets every Wednesday evening at 7:30. Every one invited.

Couldn't Beat Lutsey.

Before one of the largest audiences ever assembled at the Orpheum Saturday night, M. G. Lutsey won his wrestling match from Nels Carlson, Coos Bay champion, as rather Carlson failed to throw Lutsey within fifteen minutes.

A couple of times, Lutsey had Carlson in some pretty bad places and caused the local man some worry. Lutsey was on the defensive most of the time and won the house by his cleverness.

It is expected that a match to the limit will be arranged for about Christmas time and Coquille valley friends of Lutsey are arranging to back him to the limit.

Dr. L. G. Johnson was the referee Saturday night—Coos Bay Times.

They All Want Those Guns.

Another home guard company to compete with the two in Marshfield and one in Bandon, all claiming the 150 rifles which Sheriff Gage holds in charge for home guard organization, was formed in Powers Sunday. Thirty members were signed up and an active campaign is proceeding to bring the 50 up to 100.—Coos Bay Times.

Coquille is in that too.

We have a home guard company here which is only awaiting further instructions from the adjutant general as to how to perfect the organization.

For Farmers' Week at O. A. C.

Farmers' Week at O. A. C. the first week in January is to be a bigger event than ever. The bunch who attended from Coos county last year are mostly planning to go out again, and many others who wished they had at that time will now have another opportunity. The programs are expected to be out this week. Mr. Smith would like to know who are going at the earliest possible moment so that the Coos county crowd can get quarters together as they did last year, which makes it much more interesting.

D. Lamb, alias R. B. Johnson, was arrested in Marshfield Saturday night as a stealer and Monday morning appeared before U. S. Commissioner A. E. Peck for hearing, upon the Coos Bay Times. He waived arraignment and has been bound over to appear before the U. S. Grand Jury in Portland on a bond of $500. He was to have been taken to Portland yesterday.

The Ash Jazz Dance Wednesday evening was fairly well attended and the music was good jazz. The worst feature of the affair was the number of school children in attendance who should have been at home. After 11 o'clock the majority of those dancing were pupils in the schools or those who should be. We wonder what parents are thinking of to permit their daughters to be out till 11 or 12 o'clock at public dances.

Any one who would be interested in securing fonts of eight, ten, or twelve-point castings expended, almost as good as new, could be accommodated here at very reasonable prices.
