Flowers a Physical Wreck.
It was certainly a singular coincidence that two of the Ellison-White entertainers should suffer a complete breakdown just on the eve of reaching Coquille, but as to the facts there appears to be no question—whether the collapse of the man first on the program was physical, mental or spiritual.

The following letters explain the situation as far as the entertainment to be given by Montaville Flowers is concerned. The first is from Mr. Flowers to Ellison & White:

April 26, 1918.

Gentlemen:—Yesterday from Corvallis, I wired Coquille and received reply that they were expecting me Friday night. Until arising this morning, I fully expected to go, but this morning I found myself a physical wreck. I have gone beyond the limit of physical endurance in my struggles for the I. L. A. and I am now hardly fit to travel. On reaching Albany, I determined to go on home, fearing I might become too ill while at Coquille to go on. I wired Anderson to postpone the date until some other time.—Montaville Flowers.

The second is from Ellison & White to Mr. H. O. Anderson here:

Boise, Idaho, April 29, 1918

Dear Mr. Anderson:—Above copy of letter just received from Mr. Flowers explains itself. We wrote you Saturday and shall expect to hear from you soon as to whether or not we shall arrange for a later date for you. Mr. Flowers' work for the last few months has been unusually exacting and taxing, and he always throws every energy of his being into his work. We believe you will enjoy him all the better after he has taken a much needed rest at home. We are enclosing herewith a copy of a press clipping which will undoubtedly be of interest to you.—Ellison-White Lyceum Bureau.

The new date suggested here is being arranged for and will be announced later.

About Preserving Eggs.
Now is the time to preserve eggs for future use when eggs are high. The price of eggs now is 35 cts. per dozen which is probably as low as they will be this year.

Materials Needed.
Water glass, which is technically known as sodium silicate, is the basis of the preserving fluid. It is a very heavy, syrupy liquid, nearly colorless, which should be slightly alkaline in reaction. It may be purchased of almost any pharmacist. One gallon, diluted according to directions, one part to eight parts of water, is sufficient for approximately 30 dozen dozen eggs. An earthenware crock, with a properly fitting earthenware or tin cover, is one of the best receptacles to use. Metal should not be used in contact with the water glass. Before putting in the water glass or the eggs, scald the crock thoroughly.

Testing Eggs for Freshness.
All eggs that are put down, except possibly those that are taken directly from nests visited daily, should be tested for freshness. The method of "candling" is reliable (See Extension Bulletin No. 189), but is not always easily used. The following method is simple, requiring only materials at hand, and can be carried out accurately with no previous practice. It depends entirely upon the fact that as the egg ages its density grows less, and in consequence the more readily it floats in water or other solution. The explanation of this is that at the larger end of the egg there is a small chamber containing air, and from the time the egg leaves the hen this air chamber slowly becomes larger, due to the evaporation of the contents of the egg. The larger the air chamber becomes the more readily the egg will float. To carry out the test, place approximately one quart of water, which has been boiled, in some small enamel or earthenware container. To this, with constant stirring, add enough water glass so that a fresh egg, known to be not over 5 or 6 days old, will just sink to the bottom. The amount of water glass that must be added to the water will have to be determined by experiment. Into this solution the eggs may be placed in two and threes. All that float should be discarded, and tried out for possible household use in the near future. An egg which is ten days or two weeks old will generally float slowly nearly to the surface of the solution. One which is fairly spoiled will bob up to the top almost like a cork. Later this same test solution, after proper dilution, may be used as a part of the preserving fluid.

A. A. NICHOLLS
Announces Himself as a Candidate for the Republican Nomination for SHERIFF OF COOS COUNTY At the Primaries May 17, 1918

He is the man who will efficiently and impartially enforce the law. A member of the Royal Legion of Loggers and Lumbermen. A man who earns his bread by the sweat of his brow, not a politician. A man who has the endorsement of leading citizens all over the county, a few of which are given below:

Powers, Ore., Apr. 20, 1918.

To the voters of Coos County:—I take great pleasure in recommending Mr. A. A. Nicholls, who is a republican candidate for Sheriff. I have known Mr. Nicholls for the past thirty-five years. He did considerable work for me when I was sheriff of Coos County. He got good results and gave the very best of satisfaction. He was hired in the capacity of doing Special Deputy work. I could always rely on Mr. Nicholls when there was a criminal to be taken in.

R. M. WIEDER.
Bandon, Ore., Apr. 1918.

To the voters of Coos County:—I take great pleasure in recommending A. A. Nicholls for the Sheriff of Coos County. Nicholls has done special Deputy work for me, in the capacity of this office, which was very satisfactory. Nicholls has thorough knowledge of the entire county. And in my opinion would make a good sheriff.
