passed through the valley...
the weather is just fine. The people in this little place are very friendly to us.

Harry Goring

The most recent of the many letters received here is from Harry Goring to his parents, from which we extract the following:

Sept. 2, 1918.

Dear Mother and Father: Some time ago I promised to send a few souvenirs of the front. Yesterday I fulfilled that promise. They may not be the most select bunch of junk that I could have got but, no doubt, they will be of some interest to you. I sent four packages in all, consisting of hand grenades, fuses and driving bands and a few other articles. Later I am going to send you some dandelions or at least I think they are. When you receive these things do not be scared of them, because they are perfectly safe; they have been examined. The weather the last few days has been at times disagreeable, raining a good share of the time, but a little rain is not going to hurt an Oregonian. The leaves are starting to fall so things begin to look as though winter is not far off. Well any way before that time I expect to see and hear of some very interesting happenings in France, a lot better than we have yet heard of.

Yesterday I received a letter from Kenneth Lawrence "somewhere in France." He has been over here about two months. He says he is getting along fine and told me all about his last visit home. I have not heard from the boys for a long time. I expect they are getting along as usual. I suppose Chas. and John will soon be thinking of enlisting since the new draft age comes into effect. I have just been wondering what they would choose. I would like to see them go in the aviation with Geo. and Walter, if possible.

Fired at Kilburn's Tanks

The following from a Portland paper will interest the many people in Coos county who have sailed on the Kilburn:
From San Francisco comes a story that tanks from the steamer F. A. Kilburn, wrecked on the Atlantic coast not long ago, floated seaward and were mistaken by the gun crews of three Yankee ships, which scored hits in their intensive shooting on the belief that the tanks were U-boats. The Kilburn operated between Portland and San Francisco, as well as to intermediate ports, for a lengthy period.

A large shipment of mining machinery...
The shipment includes a 20 h. p. Diesel oil engine, which weighs about three tons; a 15-horsepower electric generator, a magnetic separator which has mammoth coils, and a number of other smaller articles. The company already has two large Diesel-Overton concentrating tables on the ground. The shipment received this week represents an investment of approximately $18,000, according to Mr. Gonnell.

The Buffers Company is one of the big mining concerns of the country. Their local project is to extract chrome from the black sands. A large quantity of the sand was, during the past six months, shipped by them to their Denver experimental station. It was there handled by the company's experts, who put sand through their magnetic extraction process. The result was sufficiently successful that the company decided to install a plant here.

Mr. Gonnell states that the plant that is being installed here will yield about 30 tons of sand per day, which, according to tests made, will yield 10 tons of chrome. Chrome at present is bringing between $80 and $90 per ton, so the output daily would be worth between $2400 and $2700. Between 10 and 15 men are to be employed.

There is no limit to the amount of chrome bearing sand to be found along the coast between Coos Bay and Port Orford. Bandon is in the heart of the deposit and the richest deposits lie here. If the first plant of the Buffers Company proves a success, it will probably constitute the first unit of an extensive undertaking that will mean much to this section from an industrial standpoint.

Black sand mining has been carried on in this community for fifty or more years, but this is the first time that an attempt has been made to extract anything but gold and platinum. The black sand carries more chrome by far than anything else, in fact the tests made by the Buffers people and other tests made by the University of California shows an average of 25 to 30 per cent. The present demand for chrome has caused the price to rise and it is this advance in price that attracted the attention of capital to the local deposits.—Bandon Work.

Lots Go Back To Pasture

An echo of the days when the town of Port Orford was being boomed as a Pacific coast seaport, resounded in the County Court room last Monday at the special session of that body, when a considerable portion of the town lots which had been platted into town lots was returned to acreage. It is understood the land is used to pasture sheep, and the burden of paying town taxes was too great for the owner.—Gold Beach Reporter.

Revenue Officer at Powers

Dan McGill, from the internal revenue office in Portland, has been in Powers collecting more evidence on the case of Whit Morris, bound over to the grand jury under $1,000 on the charge of operating a still near Powers. An assistant from the Portland office accompanied McGill and it is said that they were investigating some other reported violations of federal laws.—Times.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy the Most Reliable.

After many years' experience in the use of it and other cough medicines, there are many who prefer Chamberlain's to any other. Mrs. A. C. Kirstein, Greenville, Ill., writes: "Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has been used in my mother's home and mine for years, and we always found it a quick cure for colds and bronchial troubles. We find it to be the most reliable medicine we have used."
