Harbor Discredits Figures. Last week we quoted the Polk County Directory estimate of the population of the cities of Coos county. The figures for North Bend and Marshfield, 4,500 and 7,500 certainly seemed big enough but we did not see fit to question them, in view of the hundreds of men the shippers have called there. The Coos Bay Harbor, of North Bend, however, referring to these figures says: "The estimate for North Bend and Marshfield is certainly high enough so that there is not likely to be a mistake in having it too large. Some wonder why Polk's directory always inflates such estimates, and it is our guess that it is their line of bull to make the people feel good and create a sale for the books."
