AROUND THE WORLD WITH THE AMERICAN RED CROSS. Junior Red Cross.

Early in the participation of the United States in the world war, the American Red Cross perceived the value of mobilizing the school children of the country and the Junior Red Cross was organized. Before the war ended nine million children were enrolled and helped in the war fund and membership campaigns, in chapter production of relief supplies and manufacturing furniture for the refugees whose homes and household goods were destroyed.

Children everywhere in the United States responded to the call to service sounded by President Wilson as head of the American Red Cross. This photograph is that of an enthusiastic young Japanese member of the Junior Red Cross of Spokane, Wash., starting out on the ambitious undertaking of collecting "a mile of pennies" for war relief. A comprehensive peace program is now being worked out for the Junior Red Cross, which is being held intact.

Natural Enemies of Mosquito.
Dr. L. O. Howard, chief of the United States bureau of entomology, writing on his favorite theme, the mosquito, in a recent bulletin reviews the subject of the natural enemies of this insect. Among fish, he mentions first the common goldfish and silverfish, which destroy mosquito larvae and should be put in artificial ponds. Top-minnows are great feeders on mosquito larvae, and certain species introduced from Texas and Hawaii have proved their value, while a small top-minnow of the genus Girardinus, known in Barbados as "millions," has been used successfully in other West Indian islands. Many predatory aquatic insects feed on mosquito larvae. Certain birds prey upon the adults, and bats also eat them. Many plants are popularly believed to keep away mosquitoes, among them being several species of eucalyptus, the castor oil plant, the chinaberry tree, etc. Scientific observations have not confirmed the popular idea on this subject.—Scientific American.

Capital Punishment

In an editorial Wednesday on the desirability of restoring the death penalty for murder the Oregonian adverts to the recent tragedy in Coos county. It says:

The case of the murderer Johnson, who killed his benefactress, with awful deliberation, and who gleefully boasted of his crime and said that he would not have done it if he had feared hanging, has revived discussion of capital punishment in Oregon.

The Oregonian thinks that capital punishment for murder should be re-enacted in Oregon. It may not agree with the Walla Walla Bulletin that execution is the only sensible punishment, for it thinks the option of death or life imprisonment should be left with a jury for determination. It thinks that the beast Johnson had clearly forfeited his right to live, and should be hanged; yet it would hesitate to send to the gallows some other murderer, such, for example, as a boy of fifteen who might intercept a girl along a path in the woods, and shoot her to death. Is such a boy capable of understanding the enormity of his crime? Is he sunk, as some criminals are, to the lowest depths of degraded villainy? May he not, through appropriate discipline and punishment, in the end be restored to usefulness as a citizen? A jury may ask and decide such questions, and do justice.

As to a boy who would shoot a girl in the woods with as little compunction as he would a chipmunk, the Sentinel is in doubt what should be done. It has no slightest doubt, however, that he should be placed where he will never have another opportunity to commit a murder. And it is in doubt whether any murder could be more cold-blooded and remorseless than the one committed at Bandon the 27th of last July.

SLAVES OF CHANCE

"The habit of thrift tends to give clear eyes, good digestion, efficient muscles . . . Young people, especially, should economize, always remembering that we should have everything we really need. It is folly to skimp in eating for the sake of saving, or to wear dowdy raiment. Have what you need, but do not buy things you do not need. But there is a joy in going without things—a real tang in obtaining the superfluous.

"Loving labor and thrift go hand in hand. He who is not thrifty is a slave to circumstances. Fate says, 'Do this or that,' and if you have no surplus saved up you get the plaything of chance, the pawn of circumstance, the slave of some one's caprice, a man in a string."—Robert Hubbard.

KAHN'S COMMON SENSE

Teaching of thrift and increased investment by the people of America in government savings securities, War Savings Stamps, Treasury Certificates and in savings banks are methods advocated by Otto H. Kahn of New York for relieving the economic situation considered by the high cost of living.

This suggestion by the eminent jurist of the firm of Kahn, Loeb & Co. is the basis of the book "Common Sense."

advised government official at Washington. As a check to waste and certain forms of useless extravagance, Mr. Kahn advocated the establishment of a federal bureau of savings which would instruct the people of the United States as to the possibilities of recovering wealth from the scrap heap. He points out that the government in the last three years has saved over $600,000,000 in this manner.
