Harold Howell Not Free

After the final trial to prove at noon last Friday the Howell case was speeded up to a greater extent than was expected, so that the taking of the testimony was concluded and arguments made that afternoon.

Saturday morning Judge Coke gave his instructions to the jury, telling them that if they found that the defendant had killed the girl without premeditation they might find him guilty of manslaughter. In this connection we recall a report that the jury at the second trial at one time voted 11 to 1 for a verdict of manslaughter.

At 9:30 Saturday the case went to the jury and at 11 o'clock they came into court and Foreman E. A. Wernich reported that they found it impossible to agree. He said they had taken two ballots and stood seven for conviction. He was not allowed to complete his sentence, the judge interrupting him to say that he did not care how the jury stood. The judge did not discharge them as requested but told them it was his duty to send them back for further consideration of the case. At this time a court official who was present tells us that the defendant gave the first indications of breaking down, his iron composure forsaking him and the muscles of his mouth beginning to twitch.

At 2:30 Sunday morning, after the jury had been out seventeen hours they reported that they had agreed upon a verdict and the judge and clerk were called and the defendant and his parents had spent the night in the courtroom and his attorneys were present, though it appeared that District Attorney Hall had not been called.

The verdict was handed in and the long suspense of nine months was ended when the words "we find the defendant not guilty" were read.

Harold at once grasped his mother's hand and then proceeded to shake hands with the jurors and thank them, still manifesting that wonderful self-possession which has led so many people to believe he could not be guilty.

He refused to spend the rest of the night in what is called his cell, but is really a large room, where juvenile prisoners are kept apart from the other prisoners, but was taken over to Marshfield with his parents in an auto driven by County Surveyor McCulloch, whose wife is Mrs. Howell's sister.

The intention was said to have been that he should go north on Sunday morning's train, but the report that there was a man on that train who had threatened to shoot young Howell on sight, led the party to wait until Monday morning, when they boarded the train at the old depot, a quarter of a mile this side of the city station at Marshfield, in order to avoid a crowd in which they feared there would be enemies seeking the boy's life.

Various reports have been heard as to the destination of the boy who had been restored to liberty, the first being that it was Eastern Oregon, then that he was to be sent to Kentucky, again that he would spend the summer with an uncle at Mouth, Oregon, where the Howell family formerly resided. Finally he was to be secluded on a farm somewhere in Yamhill county. It may be very likely possible that none of these reports are correct and that it is the intention of his parents to keep his whereabouts a profound secret, lest some of Lillian Leuthold's friends should wreak vengeance upon him.

The Record says it is understood the lad was kept at the home of a peace officer in Marshfield during the twenty-four hours he remained in that city.

A thrilling rescue of a thoroughbred racer from a blazing barn by a slip of a girl. "In Old Kentucky" at the Liberty Theatre May 25 and 26.

Keep Your Liberty Loan Bonds

Liberty Loan bonds have dropped lower this week than anyone ever imagined they would when we were buying them by the billion to help win the war. Nor do we imagine anyone is sorry now that we did buy them and put the Hun out of the conquering business. Still for those who are compelled to realize on them it is pretty hard to have to stand a shave of fifteen to seventeen cents on the dollar. Even the Victory Loan bonds which bear nearly five per cent interest and mature in about four years are down to 95, so that the buyer now will realize six per cent on his investment. Our advice to everyone is to hold onto the Liberty bonds and if money must be raised on them to use them as security for loans.

Anita Stewart makes a startling leap on horseback over a broken bridge above a chasm, taking great risks, in a scene from the First National special feature, "In Old Kentucky," in which she stars. This great American classic will be shown at the Liberty Theatre on May 25 and 26.

American Legion Notes

The American Legion met Tuesday at the city hall. The meeting was well attended, having the largest turn-out since the local post was established. Since the Legion's lease expired on Gould's Hall the boys have been without quarters. They are now planning on a way by which they can purchase the ground and build a hall of their own.

In the drive for new members which is to last a week and in which they are trying to secure 25 members, has to date netted them nine new ones, leaving them a total of sixteen to secure in order to be listed as a one hundred per cent perfect post.

Walter Garding, who has been commander of the post since it was established, handed in his resignation. The by-laws of the Legion prohibit any member to run for any public office while holding any office in the Legion. Walter has not resigned from the Legion, but merely from the position of commander. Stewart Norton was elected to the vacancy. A. H. Grimes was appointed Historian in Stewart's place. Stewart not being able to hold two offices at the same time.

On account of business matters, Owen H. Knowlton resigned from the office of Adjutant and R. A. Jash was elected to succeed him.

Sunflowers a Good Crop

Some of our valley ranchers who have been experimenting with sunflowers as a silage crop will be interested in some facts Prof. Hyslop, of O. A. C., gleaned from a letter from a Deschutes county farmer, who put up 60 or 70 tons of sunflower silage from a late planted crop of five acres. He further says: "It has kept well and the cattle eat it readily. I am feeding it to dairy cows at about 80 pounds each day to the cow. I expect to fatten steers this next winter on sunflower silage and alfalfa and to winter some range stock on silage and straw. Some of my sunflowers went about 25 tons to the acre."

House Burned at Dora

The fine farm residence on the place M. J. Krantz recently sold at Dora was burned to the ground on Tuesday of last week. It was insured in the Oregon Fire Relief Association for $1200, and Mr. Geo. C. Huggins went up there the first of this week to adjust the loss. The building was worth $4,000 or $5,000, and there is some question about the completion of the purchase now, we are informed.

Wood Leads in Train Vote

A straw vote for president on the incoming mail train Tuesday afternoon is reported as follows by a strong Johnson paper:

Wood 26, Lowden 5, Johnson 12, Hoover 7, McAdoo 7, Wilson 2, Debs 1, Bryan 2, refused to vote 20.

It will be noted that General Wood had a clear lead among the republicans who voted.

Curry Gardens Suffer
The obstacles in the way of raising garden peas in Curry county are thus told by the Port Orford Tribune: "Gardeners in this section are having more trouble protecting their vegetables this spring from birds than ever before. Peas, lettuce, radishes, etc., are eaten up as soon as they appear above the ground. The English Sparrow and a smaller gray bird are the offenders, and they have come in apparently inexhaustible numbers. They seem to thrive on some kinds of poison they have been fed although it is said by those who have tried it that arsenic will kill them."
