L. D. KINNEY DEAD

Coos Bay's "Mulberry Sellers" Dies in the State Hospital at Salem.

Major L. D. Kinney, the Marshfield promoter, who has been for several years past an inmate of the state hospital for the insane at Salem, died there Monday morning. From a biographical sketch published in the Coos Bay Times we make the following extracts:

Major Kinney had led one of the most unique business careers in this part of the country. The history of his life is a romance of the ups and downs of a promoter who had operated in Salt Lake City, in Alaska, and finally on Coos Bay. He handled on Coos Bay a large amount of property which became involved in litigation and has been in the courts for some years past. While at times Major Kinney had handled a great deal of money, he was practically without anything when his mind gave way excepting his interests in the involved property.

Major Kinney was a native of Nova Scotia. He told of his first promotion scheme, which he attempted when he was 16 years of age, when he made a deal in buying up sheep in his neighborhood and the deal was a failure. He went to Boston and there promoted a scheme for handling a patent medicine.

In 1888 he went to Salt Lake City and staid there until 1896. He promoted a scheme for the establishment of a smelter, and laid out an addition to the city. The latter became involved in litigation.

On the site of the smelter which the major promoted at Salt Lake is now one of the biggest smelter plants in Utah, so his original idea proved finally to be well founded.

In 1896 Major Kinney went to Skagway, Alaska. There he attempted a big scheme. His idea was to promote a railroad which was to tunnel through Chilcoot mountain and run from Dyea to Dawson and be in opposition to the White Pass railroad. He was associated with Michael King, a member of parliament Tony Leimeister, a butcher, became one of Kinney's close co-workers in this scheme.

Major Kinney met with a good deal of opposition to his railroad scheme from the White Pass railroad. He did not have the money to put through the scheme, but prepared his plans and started for San Francisco with Leimeister, the latter having influential connections in California.

This was Kinney's final departure from Alaska. He did not succeed in getting the financial backing at San Francisco for the Alaska railroad.

While in that city he met a Salt Lake City banker who knew of his operations in Utah. From him he procured a letter telling of the promotion work in Salt Lake City. The letter was directed to one of the heads of a Portland trust company.

Major Kinney came from San Francisco to Coos Bay and Roseburg. He decided on this part of the state to promote as a railroad terminus. He went to Portland, presented his letter to a man in the trust company, and it is said that he secured $20,000 in cash with which to operate on the strength of his scheme to promote this locality. His plan was to get options on land on Coos Bay and around Roseburg and to build a railroad to Marshfield.

Several companies were formed here. One was a land company, and another was a company to build a railroad from Salt Lake City to Coos Bay. Still another scheme was to build a road around Coos Bay which was to be used by any railroad that came to this place. A company was formed and known as the Belt Line railway.

Stock in the companies was sold, property was bought and sold, and all interested became involved. Major Kinney had secured some of the best located property on the bay. At one time he controlled what would amount to 10,000 town lots if all platted.

John Kollock, of Portland, was finally appointed trustee of the property. F. B. Waite held a big mortgage, back taxes on the property accumulated in great amount and by various sales and mortgages the property became badly involved, and has for some years been in the courts. The companies which Major Kinney formed became insolvent and the whole scheme fell through.

Whenever Major Kinney failed in any of his projects he always suffered a severe illness. With his last failure he broke down and finally his mind was affected and he was committed to the asylum.

Major Kinney had a magnetism about him which with many people won their utmost confidence. Even when without any finances at all at his command, he would be able to discuss enormous plans and held the confidence of many who always hoped that he would finally gain ultimate success. Major Kinney is survived by two daughters and his wife. The latter resided in North Bend until recently, when she went to Ottawa, Canada, to live with relatives. Nothing has yet been learned of arrangements for the funeral.

House From His Own Trees

J. B. Keizer and wife are at Lakeside this week building a house 20x26 feet, which they propose to fit up comfortably. The house is being built on property recently purchased on Shutter's inlet to the lake. The lumber being used in the house was cut from trees grown on the place which were cleared away for the yard. The local mill on the lake turned the logs into lumber and the identical pieces were sent back to be constructed into the building.—Coos Bay Harbor.

REMAINED SLAVE OF CUSTOM

Augusta Housewife was "Set" in Her Ways, and Nothing Was Going to Change Her.

A man in an Augusta car seat talking to another man who appears to be his friend:

"Persistent! Say, my wife is that and some more. She is the most tenacious to habit of any person I ever saw. Once that woman has become addicted to a habit there's no breaking her. Honest, I think that if my wife should ever by accident start sweeping with the wrong end of a broom she'd never sweep any other way, and no law of heaven and earth could change her habit."

"Some persistent, I'll say," agreed the other.

"You bet," said the first speaker. "Why, here last summer I put a bay window on the front room of our house. There was a week while we were doing it that the whole end of the house was open as a hay field in August; there wasn't a single thing to prevent man or animal entering our house at any hour of daylight or darkness. Fact! But what do you think; I couldn't make my wife understand that it was, under those conditions, a waste of time to lock the doors. Every night and every time she went down street she made a complete circuit of the house, carefully locking doors and windows, so's to keep the wicked folks out."—Kennebec Journal.

ETHEL'S MEMORY WAS GOOD

Sweet Child Remembered Only Too Well Remark That Her Mother Had Let Drop.

Cousin Robert from the country, had come to dinner, and little Ethel had been allowed to sit up as a great treat.

Now, Ethel is one of those children one meets nowadays who hear a great deal too much for their years, and moreover, who don't believe in the saying about children not being heard. You can't stay near dear little Ethel without hearing quite a lot.

Which all gets on with the story of the night when Cousin Robert came to supper.

"Do have another helping of the popple, Robert!" said Ethel's mother, after Robert had already caused two platefuls to disappear.

"Well, Cousin Mary, I think I will, since you are so pressing," replied the guest.

"You win, mother!" exclaimed Ethel suddenly; and mother, caught napping, turned to her with a smile and asked:

"Win, dear?"

"Yes, I heard you say to father this morning that you bet a dollar that Cousin Robert behaved like a pig!"

Nut Butter is Wholesome.

Cocoa butter, as nut butter is called in England, was not accepted with enthusiasm by the British public when natural butter became scarce during the war, so the food committee of the Royal society made some elaborate tests of its effects on human beings. The New York Medical Journal summarizes the results, which show that slightly less of the fat of cocoa butter than of that of real butter is utilized by the body; it causes no digestive troubles; when consumed in large quantities it has a slightly laxative effect, and in general it is a safe and wholesome food.

Skeletons of Ancient Race.

Bacusse-Rousse, at Mentone, France, is an ancient dwelling place where bones of people of the Paleolithic, or Stone age, were found. In the museum at Monaco there are skeletons of this ancient people, which give an impression that they were brutish creatures, apelike and uncouth. The Red Cliff skeletons, as they are called by the English, after the English name for the dwelling place, show, however, the characteristic features of the bones of modern men and women, differences being very slight.

Johnson's Mill

We are having fine weather for haying but a little rain would help other crops.

Mrs. Jas. Stinson, who has been in California looking after their interest in land in Shasta county, is expected home any day now.

Mrs. Robert Backman, of Curry county, is visiting at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Stinson.

The young ladies of this vicinity gave Miss Bessie Finley quite a surprise last Monday afternoon in honor of her eighteenth birthday. The house was decorated with white and red flowers, the table was decorated with flowers and kewpies and when Bessie came in from town and found everything in order to surprise her they did not miss their aim for she was certainly surprised. Those present were Misses Addie, Myrtle, Dorothy, Hazel and Alice Newton, Ena Ellis, Genevieve Stinson, Lucile Hoover, Mabel O'Neil, Minnie and Verna Finley and Mrs. E. B. Finley. They played games and at four o'clock they gathered in the dining room and had cake and punch served them, and then went out and took pictures. All expressed themselves as having a very pleasant time and as Bessie received many nice presents and got the ring in the cake she enjoyed the occasion, too.

Rev. L. G. Weaver and wife took dinner at E. B. Finley's Sunday. Mr. Weaver preached at Fishtrap Sunday morning and evening.

Mrs. George Halter expects to leave on the early train Monday to visit relatives and friends in Portland.

Mrs. Cook, who has been on the sick list for several days, is better at this writing.

Norman Halter, who has been down with typhoid fever, is up and able to walk around again.

The Ladies Aid met with and sewed for Mrs. Halter last Thursday.

Miss Callie Owens, of North Bend, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Charlie Newton, returned home the other day.

Guy Finley and wife visited at the home of Guy's parents last Sunday.

Young and old met at Mr. Newton's last Saturday night and made and ate ice cream to their heart's content.

Mrs. Nota Finley was up Wednesday helping her mother-in-law can peas. Guess they are fixing for winter.

Mrs. E. B. Finley expects to leave next Monday for Salem to visit her niece, Mrs. Ennis.

Ladies Aid Commission Sale

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist church, desirous of raising funds for the new church and other worthy purposes in the line of church activities, have undertaken a most ambitious project—which they will no doubt carry through as successfully as they do everything else they undertake.

They will on Friday and Saturday, Sept. 3 and 4, hold a commission sale in the basement of the South church at which they purpose to sell everything turned over to them for that purpose and try to fill the wants of all buyers who will give them a list of their needs.

Nothing will be too big or too small for them to handle, from a farm to a furbelow; from a threshing machine to a paper of pins.

If you know of anything you are going to need in the near future from a washing machine or a china closet to a kitchen apron or a bushel of plums, they are anxious to serve you. Bring anything you want to sell and tell your wants to the following committee: Mrs. E. E. Johnson, Mrs. M. O. Hawkins, Mrs. J. A. Lamb, Mrs. E. O. Faustman, and Mrs. Stewart Norton.
