Dairy League at the Bay

The Marshfield unit of the Oregon Dairywomen's Co-operative league held a meeting Monday morning at the Odd Fellows hall at which there was an attendance of approximately 80 per cent of the membership on Coos Bay. This means there were over 100 ranchers from a number of districts at the conference, which was similar to those held at frequent intervals when they get together and discuss affairs and find out how the products are selling.

Alma D. Katz, head of the league, came down especially to attend the gathering and during the time which it was in session made an address that greatly pleased the assemblage.

The conference was harmonious, and the ranchers in general signed up to take stock for the milk delivered during last June. Two or three ranchers from Daniels creek refused to take stock for the milk of that month and will be paid in cash.

The members of the league who deliver to this manufacturing and shipping point have been paid for July and August deliveries and the league is now getting on a basis where confidence is restored and things are running smoothly.

The ranchers who leave a meeting and discuss affairs afterwards are the barometer by which to judge what is going on in the league, and today there was a general agreement that things were going well.—Daily News.

Up-to-Date Marshfield Doctors Prescribing by Wireless

An unusual happening occurred to Dr. Everett Mings this morning when he received word from the radio station in Englewood that a boat, the Ines H. Meyers, plying between Portland and San Francisco, had wired that they wanted a Marshfield doctor to prescribe for one of their men. The first mate on the boat had taken lye by mistake and was in a very serious condition. Dr. Mings had a wire sent to the boat telling what to do for the man, and at last reports he was recovering nicely.

Hires Special Train

Monday noon Dr. Keiser, of North Bend, received an emergency call from Lakeside to attend Mrs. Hillis Short, whose condition was reported to have been developing alarming symptoms. The district had no facilities for transporting Dr. Phil Keiser there and so he was obliged to engage a special train of the Southern Pacific at a cost of $100. It was said Mrs. Short's trouble was of an intestinal nature and very serious.

East Fork Notes

The funeral of William Culbertson was held at the Dora cemetery Wednesday the 8th inst. Ham Bunch conducted the services. Mr. Culbertson was born in Ray county, Tenn., July 24th, 1831. On April 23rd, 1858, he married Ellen Jane Freeman. There was a family of eight children, six of whom are living in this county: Mrs. Chas. Heller, Mrs. Louis Heller, of McKinlay; Mrs. Albert Bright, of Gravel Ford; John, at Cooper's Bridge; William T., of Dora School District; and Leonard, of North Bend. He and family crossed the plains for the Pacific coast, via the ox team route in 1875. They located in Eastern Washington and after about six years came to Coos county. There was a large attendance at his funeral and he was known as a kindly kind of a man.

Friday and Saturday, big storms; the East Fork was up seven feet Saturday morning above low water mark. The loggers got their logs down the river and into the boom at Cottons. This water made almost a clean sweep of the logs, only a few left up on the banks. From Elk creek to the boom the river is full of logs.

Brewster Valley was flooded in spots Saturday. Mr. Cordray brought his mail car back from the postoffice to a garage near Joe Albino's. Saturday morning he packed the mail around by James Benham's place. Julius Benham was up the valley as far as J. D. Laird's. There were two places in the road that the water ran into his wagon box. The new grade was flooded but did not wash out. Earlier in the week there was quite a big slide on Brewster grade above Panther creek, washing out the road so that the place had to be bridged. Saturday morning the road was blocked by trees in several places. The mail did not get down until afternoon.

Mr. Rucker, of Bridge, who started to go across the mountain and had car trouble, went with his son, Fred, to Brewster Valley Friday night and came back with the car Saturday, bound for home, the trip over the mountain with the car postponed.

The Garroni baby is quite sick. Henry Charlton, the boss powder man on the road job, got something in his eye and had to go to town to see a doctor. He and Alex Anderson, the engineer on the job, went to Coquille Friday.

Good morning, Mr. Normalcy, have you observed that the League of Nations is in perfect working order, that Paul Hymans, of Belgium, was elected permanent president and the first assembly was opened Nov. 15 at the League's headquarters in Geneva. Geneva is in Switzerland, not in Ohio, Mr. Normalcy. How does this first meeting of the league's assembly strike you, does it not look as though the nations of the earth are out to do business on a peace basis, even if the elected mouthpiece of the Republican party says there is no such thing as the league of nations?

for it is "deceased." Cecil of England says the League of Nations is alive. Elihu Root, of New York state, says you can't tear the League to pieces unless loss and disaster occurs. Bill Hohenzollern is not for the League of Nations, for if things get back to "normalcy," he would be Billie 2 again and all Germany would be as it was before, a land whose "solid gold" prize vases would be nothing but a coat of yellow white wash over pewter. Sure, Germany, the junkers, would like to get back to the normalcy might makes right. That is what the prophets of Babel yelled for; they were afraid they would lose their normalcy.

You seem to think this referendum vote has settled things. Years and years and centuries ago, there was a referendum vote taken and by that vote Barabbas, the robber, was turned loose and the Son of God and Man was crucified. What was the matter with the voters that day? Nothing at all, Mr. Normalcy, they only wanted to get back to "normalcy." They got back or rather they never got away from their normalcy. What was the result? Did Barabbas, did "normalcy" win out on that election day? According to the return, yes, but the seed of triumphant righteousness sown that day has brought forth thirty, forty, sixty, a hundred fold. The League of Nations is in the hundred fold class.

Even if the United States of America has slapped itself in the face, judging from the face of the returns and failed to "keep faith with those who lie where the poppies blow on Flanders Fields," triumphant righteousness has not been voted down any more than it was less than nineteen hundred years ago. You may turn back the hands of the clock, but you can't change the mark of the sun upon the dial. E. A. Easton.

Making Handles at Eugene

Three large shipments of wood products from the Eugene Handle Company's plant have been made to San Francisco and Portland within the last few days. Handles are made from ash grown in Lane county and converted for use on shovels, forks, rakes and other implements. Wood formerly hauled to town for fuel is purchased and sawed from the green logs into square strips and run through dry kilns, then lathed. A sandpapering and waxing process finishes the handles, which are shipped in thousand dozen lots.

The Smith River Timber

The Smith River Timber company, with a capital stock of $500,000 has been incorporated and represents another step towards consummation of the purchase of the Gardiner Mill company holdings by a syndicate, to have headquarters in Marshfield. The deal is one of the largest handled in southwestern Oregon this year and includes the Gardiner townsite and mill, also several thousand acres of timber.
