There is but little going on in this part of the country that will interest the general reading public, but to us a wedding is an event of some importance.

Items of the Irrigation Country.

While the present irrigation fund of $25,000,000 would not go very far, distributed throughout the 16 great western states and territories, in two, three, or four million dollar amounts, it is being made to carry forward a quite uniform and comprehensive irrigation development, by making the irrigation works pay for themselves.

In other words it is not the program of the Reclamation Service to build large projects complete immediately, but to finish a small but independent portion of each project so that the water rights of the lands thus irrigated may be sold to the settlers and thus immediately furnish money with which to carry the work still farther. The government is in each case starting the works, and allowing the project itself and the settlers to provide for its completion. And as in all the government projects the lands are being eagerly taken up by settlers, there is no question of the success and completion of the works, of however great magnitude.

EASTERN BUSINESS MEN INTERESTED.

That the eastern part of the United States is not indifferent to the national benefit of irrigation and the development of the west is shown by the intelligent resolutions passed at the recent annual meeting of the National Association of Manufacturers held at Atlanta, Ga., on May 21.

Recognizing that the reclamation of western desert areas will furnish the finest market possible for eastern manufactures, the resolutions commended the administration of Secretary Hitchcock of the Interior Department who is charged with the administration of the irrigation law, endorsed Director Walcott and Chief Engineer Newell of the Reclamation Service and pledged to them the support of some 3300 of the largest manufactures in the United States in their continued efforts to carry out the national irrigation act for the creation of the largest possible number of prosperous American homes.

The resolutions further set forth that the profound importance of the social and philanthropic features of the irrigation movement and the subdivision of large land tracts into small homes should be impressed upon the American people to the end that America should become a nation of rural homes rather than one of large cities.

The resolutions call attention to the great public importance of the national frauds, the weakness of our present land laws and strongly support the recommendation of President Roosevelt's Public Land Commission for a thorough reform in our land laws to the end that the public lands be held strictly for real settlers and against speculators.

DRY LAND RECLAMATION.

Colorado, Wyoming and Montana are apparently waking up to the fact that several million acres of land in those states which have been for years grazed upon by cattle and sheep and considered worthless for agriculture in any form, can be made to grow very profitable crops of grains, forage, and in some cases even vegetables and fruit. The rainfall in these regions is comparatively slight, but it happens to come at just the growing season of the crops and the soil is so wonderfully retentive of moisture as well as productive that from 15 to 30 bushels of wheat per acre and other crops in proportion, can be raised on as little as 12 or 16 inches of rainfall, which in eastern states would not suffice to half way mature a crop. The "dry farm" experts state that there are at least a hundred million acres of land distributed throughout the western states, in some places in very considerable tracts and in other sections in small patches, where the climatic conditions are such that the lands will yield crops as good as the average farm lands of the Mississippi Valley. This class of development by better cultivation of the soil, in connection with the introduction by the government of foreign plants specially adapted to American arid land conditions and further joined by the great agricultural development under national irrigation will cause in the next ten years a mighty transformation in the west.
