To the Editor.

Dear Sir:

Now as the Lewis & Clark Centennial Exposition is rapidly drawing to a triumphant close, I take great pleasure in offering to you my sincere thanks for your hearty co-operation.

The Western World's Fair has been an unqualified success. The attendance has been remarkable. Visitors from every portion of the country have come to Portland during the past four and a half months to see the two great expositions—the Lewis and Clark Exposition and the wonderful western country. The eyes of the world have been turned toward Portland, Oregon, and the Pacific Northwest, which fact proves without a doubt that the Lewis and Clark Exposition has successfully accomplished its primary object that of exploitation of the marvelous country west of the Rocky Mountains.

Aside from the fact that the Lewis and Clark Exposition has been successful in accomplishing its purpose it has also been a financial success. The admissions and money collected from other sources of revenue will enable the directorate to pay a fair percentage of the stock subscription. The attendance is rapidly climbing toward the 2,500,000 mark which is likely to be reached by October 15. The admissions have gone ahead of those at the Trans-Mississippi Exposition at Omaha, which heretofore was generally conceded to have been the most successful of world's fairs. This result is more remarkable when it is considered that within a radius of 500 miles of Omaha there live 13,000,000 people while the population within a similar radius of Portland is only 1,800,000. This fact shows that many of the visitors came from distant points.

Too much credit cannot be given the newspapers and magazines of the country for their aid in making the Western World's Fair a success. They have supported the exposition generously from the first and printer's ink has again obtained the desired result.

I desire again to thank you for the assistance your paper has given in the work of making a successful exposition.

Yours very truly,
Frank L. Merrick,
Manager General Press Bureau.

Cannot Destroy Nets.

Frank W. Smith, deputy fish warden, calls our attention to the following decision, recently handed down by the supreme court of the state of Washington, thinking that it might be of interest to fishermen and the owners of steamboats and launches on the bay and tributaries. The decision is to the effect that a steamboat or launch has no right to wotily or maliciously destroy a fish trap or net, even if it may be an obstruct to navigation. The decision was returned in the case of James Fowler, respondent, vs. Martin Harrison and Ben Harrison, appellants, from Chehalis county. Fowler had some fishnets and traps and a dolphin in the Chehalis river. The appellants, with steamer Fleetwood, ran down the nets, although other navigators had no trouble in steering around them. Fowler secured a judgment for $605 damages, and the steamboat men appealed. The supreme court, while not passing upon the scope of authority of a federal license in an alleged obstruction of a state waterway, held that the steamboat men had no right to wantonly destroy the property, and accordingly affirmed the judgment.—News.

Coos Bay-Roseburg Line.

Frank E. Alley, a prominent attorney of Roseburg, is in the city on a business trip. Mr. Alley is enthusiastic about the proposed railroad from Roseburg to Coos Bay.

"I believe it is the most certain of realization of any of the lines now projected in Oregon," he said last night. "Mr. F. J. Blakely, of Roseburg, who is at the head of the Oregon end of the enterprise, is backed by capitalists of Toledo, O. who have unlimited means at their disposal. The people of Douglas County look upon the project as almost a certainty."

"The line would be operated as an electric road to begin with. It will be made on the standard gauge, however, and will be changed to a steam road later on. A road between Roseburg and Coos Bay is one of the very few lines that would yield a profit from the very first day it is completed."—Oregonian.
