Parkersburg in Ashes.
On Saturday during the noon hour, the Parkersburg mill caught fire and the mill and all the houses, except four, in the burg were soon destroyed, as well as the mill store which contained the postoffice. While the mill crew were at dinner and the steamer Liberty was lying at the dock, on which H. W. Dunham is engineer, the fire started. Mr. Dunham being the first to see it. He gave the alarm, but the fire spread so rapidly that there was no time to make an attempt to save the mill. Mr. Dunham and the deckhand succeeded in getting the Liberty out of the way, and with her, assisted the schooner Oregon from the dock, but not before she was considerably damaged, much of her rigging being burned and the hull severely charred on one side. The schooner Advance also, was lying at the wharf but was in a position to be more easily moved and her crew succeeded in getting her away without injury. Beside the mill and store, all dwellings in the burg were destroyed except four, and as we understand, two of them did not amount to very much. Thus it will be seen that the little town was almost literally wiped out, leaving a considerable number of people without shelter. The mill was the property of the Doe estate, of San Francisco and was estimated to be worth in the neighborhood of $30,000, and was partially insured.
