Angoras in Southern Oregon.
The vast mountain ranges of the southern part of Oregon, covered only with sparse timber, brush and short grass, which have long been supposed good for little else than the mineral found upon them, are proving of great worth as a range for the Angora goat.
Several ranches have already been stocked in Josephine county, and the success of these is leading others to follow.
Among the many to get the "goat fever" is E. R. Curtis of Portland, Oregon, manager of the Germania Life Insurance company. Mr. Curtis is now negotiating for the purchase of a large tract of goat range near Grants Pass which he intends to stock with Angoras. F. R. Pierce, formerly of Colorado, has a large ranch near Merlin, Josephine county that he has stocked with goats and which has proved very profitable during the past two years.

Several of the owners of hydraulic placer mines, with vast range at their command, are planning to stock their holdings with goats. The goats will not interfere with the mines and add materially to the receipts from the leggings; also, the goat herds will give the placer miner something to do during the dry summer season. It is believed that within two or three years Josephine county will become one of the leading goat sections of the Pacific coast.
"Our goats are paying us about $1 10 each annually from mohair alone," said Mr. Pierce, manager of the Pierce ranch near Merlin. "The kids are worth from $2.50 to $3.50 when six months old. Goats demand ample range, and since we have range in plenty for them here in Josephine county, we have an advantage in this respect over other localities. They should have an average range of one acre to every five goats in the flock. The goat rancher needs only a few acres of cultivated ground on which to grow hay for the few weeks' winter feeding that may be necessary; in truth, the winters are so mild that the goats can run out the entire year."

"It is well to have the goats home at night on account of the cougars and coyotes. Ours trouble us but little in this regard. They leave early each morning and come back to the barns at 4 or 5 in the evening. We have a well trained dog that taught them this habit. If they are not in on time the dog goes out after them. As an additional inducement to get them to come home at night we deep plenty of salt around the barns and do all the feeding from the racks under the sheds."
"We keep only good Angoras, these being more profitable, more hardy, and better adapted to the mountain range. A flock of 100 Angoras costs $500, but even at this cost they are a source of profit after the second year. The first year's clip from 100 will average two and a half pounds to the goat, which, at 30 cents per pound, brings returns of $75. In addition to this there will be at least fifty kids, which are worth $3 each at six months, or a total of $235 for mohair and kids. Deducting all expenses, a herd of 100 goats will yield a clear profit of $200 the first year. By careful attention to the matter of selecting fine bucks and weeding out the scrubby nannies from year to year, the lead can be bred up to average returns of three and a half pounds of mohair each. Bucks that will clip six and eight pounds a year can be bought for $40 or $50, and such bucks will pay from 7 to 10 per cent in the investment the very first year they are bought."—Pacific Homestead.

Celebrated 55th Wedding anniversary.
McMinville, Or., Nov. 15.—Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hoberg celebrated their 55th wedding anniversary Tuesday. Every train for a day or so brought children and grandchildren to take part in this event. They were married at Galena, Ill., November 13, 1851. They removed to Iowa in 1857, and came to Oregon in 1866, by way of Nicaragua. In 1869 Mr. Hoberg became a member of the Oregon Conference of the Methodist Church, and for 12 years preached up and down the Willamette Valley. They lived at Lafayette for many years, and came to McMinville 77 years ago. Mr. Hoberg, as pastor, was the prime mover that caused to be built the fine Methodist Church at this place.
Mr. Hoberg has officiated at more weddings and funerals in Oregon than any other minister.
Following are their children; Frank Hoberg, of Portland; Mrs. Ella J Metzger, of Dallas; J. G. Hoberg, of Haines, Baker county, Or.; Mrs. George M. Knight, Seattle, Wash.; R. O. Hoberg, Coquille City, whose birthday is on the wedding anniversary, and Eva L. Milsap, of Lebanon. Mr. and Mrs. Hoberg are both enjoying good health, and mixed in the games and merriment of their many grandchildren.
The lives of Mr. and Mrs. Hoberg have been filled with honor and usefulness, and their many friends from all parts of the state express the hope that they may celebrate many more anniversaries of their wedding.
Arrangements are being made by the War Department to transport to the Philippine islands and to Cuba, free of charge, Christmas boxes intended for the officers and enlisted men of the army, navy and marine corps serving on those distant stations. Boxes for the Philippines will sail on the transport Thomas from San Francisco, December 5th. They should be sent to that point in care of the depot quartermaster there, express charges must be prepaid and the box plainly marked "Christmas Box." The boxes for Cuba should be marked in the same way but sent to Newport News, Va, where the transport Sumner will take them to Cuba, sailing about December 10th. It is said that at both sailing points a large number of Christmas boxes have already arrived and are awaiting transportation.

Cured Consumption.
Mrs. B. W. Evans, Clearwater, Kans., writes: "My husband lay sick for three months. The doctors said that he had quick consumption. We procured a bottle of Ballard's Horehound Syrup, and it cured him. That was six years ago. Since that we have always kept a bottle in the house. We cannot do without it. For coughs and colds it has no equal." 25c, 50c and $1.00. Sold by R. S. Knowlton.

President Roosevelt's lion is dead. It was chloroformed three days after the President left Washington on his trip to Panama. This is one of the animals presented to the President by King Menelik of Abyssinia in 1904 and which was injured while being transported to the United States. The injury, slight at first, instead of improving from the constant care and treatment given it at the National zoo Park, gradually became worse finally reaching such an acute stage that it was found necessary to use chloroform to rid the great beast of its misery. When the lion first arrived at the White House it was not much more than a cub and its playful ways soon made it a prime favorite among the pets of the Roosevelt children as well as an attraction to friends of the family and to visitors at the Mansion. It grew rapidly and was removed to the zoo park but was never placed in one of the exhibition cages on account of its injury, although it received frequent visits from the children of the White House who were always concerned in its welfare.
Compared to the slow work usually done on public buildings when constructed by the government, it is wonderful to note the rapid progress being made on the immense new building of the department of agriculture, now being erected on the southern half of the Mall near the Washington Monument.
The two wings of the building, each 256 feet long, are well under way, and by this date next year will be finished and ready for occupancy. An appropriation for the central part, which is to be 238 feet long, will probably be made at the coming session of Congress. The entire building will be 750 feet in length, just a foot less than the greatest dimension of the Capitol. When the department was reorganized, the necessity of housing a number of its branches in rented buildings but until the main portion of the executive officers will continue as at present in the old Agricultural Department building.
That to the many public buildings of the Nation's capital will soon be added a structure of such magnitude is not generally realized by visitors to the city or by those who reside here. The new Department of Agriculture, the Capitol, the new National Museum and the new Union Station complete the four largest of the public buildings in Washington.

After the Pacific Coast Lumber Trust.
San Francisco, Nov. 22.—United States District Attorney Devlin said today regarding his investigation of the so-called lumber trust, that all the evidence he had gathered had been transmitted to the attorney general at Washington for consideration. He said the greater part of the lumber used in San Francisco is manufactured in Oregon, and the mills are situated in those states. "It is probable," he said, "an investigation will be held in those states to determine whether the price of lumber is made on the output made by a combination. So far as any combination among dealers of San Francisco alone is concerned, Devin said the government has no jurisdiction.
From Napier, New Zealand, Herald: Two years ago the Pharmacy Board of New South Wales, Australia, had an analysis made of all the cough medicines that were sold in that market. Out of the entire list they found only one that they declared was entirely free from all poisons. This exception was Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, made by the Chamberlain Medicine Company, Des Moines, Iowa, U. S. A. The absence of all narcotics makes this remedy the safest and best that can be had; and it is with a feeling of security that any mother can give it to her little ones. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is especially recommended by its makers for coughs, colds, croup and whooping cough. This remedy is for sale by R. S. Knowlton.

Officials in many bureaus of the government service coming under the head of the Interior Department are wondering if they will be affected by the sweeping changes planned by James R. Garfield, now commissioner of corporations, and which he proposes to make when he assumes the office of Secretary of the Interior next March. Secretary Hitchcock some time ago, contemplated a complete reorganization such as is talked of now, but knowing that he would soon retire, decided to leave the matter to his successor. It is understood that the General Land Office will be the first branch to hear from the new secretary, for, according to a report recently rendered the President, that office is now and has been for years, the worst mismanaged department in the government service. Its system of conducting business is many years behind the times and each succeeding Commissioner has done little or nothing to bring it up to modern standards. The belief is expressed that a more alert administration of its affairs would have made impossible the gigantic frauds perpetrated by the land grafters. When he assumes his new duties Secretary Garfield will have his hands full in "making over" the Interior Department, as it is one of the most ponderous branches of the Federal Government. Through it millions of dollars are distributed yearly; it has an army of employees and has jurisdiction over the Patent Office, the Pension Office, the Indian Office, the Geological Survey and the Bureau of Education. In carrying out the new policies, the new Secretary will have the complete support of the President who has long been anxious to have the working methods of several departments changed to conform to the recommendations of the Keap Investigation.
