Cut Down the Old Orchards.

It is the proper season for moving on the old orchards of the Willamette valley. Most of them are a perennial signal of distress. The worm-eaten, stunted fruit from them is of no value. They are the nesting place and brooding ground of fruit diseases and pests. Because of this they handicap the fruit industry by perpetuating hostile conditions that could otherwise be controlled. Legislation to secure their cleansing, has been invoked, but has largely failed. Legislation to destroy them has like wise failed. By the hundred they survive in pest-breeding and disease-dissminating unsightliness all over western Oregon.

Yet by a little effort and slighter expense, these old orchards can be put on a handsomely paying basis. It is the claim of experts that old trees that are yet healthy can within three to five years be put into condition to yield a return of $5 to $10 each per year. M. O. Lowndale says it can be done, and has been done. The plan is to cut down the tree close to the ground, preserving only the roots. That should be done by March 1. The next year modern commercial varieties are grafted on the best of the sprouts. In three or four years a new and vigorous tree is in bearing. The old unsightly orchard is gone and a beautiful one is in its place. Disease has been banished and youthful health set up. The old, multiplied and unsalable varieties of pioneer time have been replaced with apples the world wants and pays big prices for. The orchard land that paid nothing has become the most profitable spot, acre for acre, on the farm. A long stride has been made to modernize the farm, with the result that its desirability and salability is heightened.

In no line in Oregon is there a way to get quick and heavy returns at so small an outlay of effort. It is the quickest way to make an orchard, and if universally and at once applied in the old orchards, it would quickly make the Willamette valley, in point of volume, one of the greatest apple producing sections in the world. The value of the plan is accentuated by the fact that Oregon Newtowns are selling today in the London market for almost as much a box as eastern apples bring per barrel.—Oregon Daily Journal.

COQUILLE CREAMERY SOLD.

Plant to be Remodeled and Greatly Improved.

The Fred B. Haight & Co., of San Francisco, of which George E. Peoples, of this city, is manager for Oregon, has purchased the old Coquille Creamery from Fred T. Hilmer & Co., and have started it up again. Plans are under way and extensive improvements will be begun in the near future which, when completed, will make this the most up-to-date plant in the county. A part of the machinery from the O. K. Creamery in this city will be used, as also the ice plant which will be installed to cool the cream and different rooms including the moulding and storage rooms. Mr. Peoples has gained quite a reputation for himself and his firm in this section for fairness and has done a great deal toward the up-building of the dairy industry on the Coquille river.

The plant will be styled the O. K., and they will continue to turn off that gilt-edge product the O. K. pasteurized creamery butter for which there is an increasing demand. We wish them success in their new undertaking and feel sure that it will be a great benefit to all concerned.

It is surprising how many unconstitutional things legislatures and city councils can do without trying. The Kansas man who killed himself because he was tired of getting up at three o'clock in the morning to milk the cows probably considered it too big a job to kill the cows. The recently deceased Mass. millionaire who never spent a cent for pleasure will be disappointed if he finds himself spending eternity in a region where no pleasure is to be had for love or money.

Shall the Nation Furnish Work?

The proposed appeal of the Central Federated Union to the Government for work for the unemployed may appear to show socialistic tendencies. It does pray for paternalism.

Yet if capital in time of stringency may expect Federal assistance, may not labor as logically ask for it? The sight of a Secretary of the Treasury in Wall street is a familiar one. What should there be incongruous in the presence of a Secretary of the Interior devoting his attention to labor conditions in a period of industrial distress? Labor cannot protect itself with clearing-house certificates. It may not use Government credit against future earnings. It may not import work by banks import gold—through the example of idle immigrant workmen returning to Europe to seek it is suggestive of a new adjustment of international labor relations.

It was not until this nation was seventy years old that its attitude toward internal improvements was definitely established. Men are yet living who witnessed both the sale at auction of Government wheelbarrows and spades used in interior construction work and the eventual adoption of a settled policy of internal improvements. Is that policy to be further developed to the point of providing work for idle labor on the analogy of the assistance rendered to capital?

The great public works on which the Government is engaged, the river and harbor improvements, the Panama Canal, reforestation, irrigation of arid regions, naval construction and repair, furnish opportunity for the employment of many thousands of men. It should be feasible to adapt the supply of work to the demand, expanding or contracting it as industrial needs vary. If mints are set working to replenish a shortage of gold, why, the unions may ask, should not the analogy hold good for public works and idle labor? Why should a device possible in Ireland in the potato famine, or in India at the present day, be denied to Americans out of work?

The question raised is one of wide economic interest. It is not a new one; Rome had to deal with it. Its present novelty lies in the progress toward Federalistic ideas indicated in the proposal that the nation shall supply the remedy for industrial distress.—New York World.

Myrtle Point Surprise.

Mrs. R. C. Duncanson returned yesterday from an extended visit at the home of her daughter, Mrs. F. M. White of Klamath Falls, this state.

Mrs. Mary Hull, wife of C. H. Hull, died in Portland recently and was buried in the Lewis and Clark cemetery. Mrs. Hull was a daughter of John Otto, and was born at Bancroft, September 11, 1882. She leaves a husband and three little children to mourn her loss.

The state librarian gives Myrtle Point credit with having invested more money in library books than any town of its size in the state. The funds for this have been largely secured through the efforts of the teachers and pupils and they can take a great deal of satisfaction in the results achieved.

The Myrtle Point public school has just added 169 new volumes to its library, which now gives the children access to more than 300 books. They have been ordered from the state library commission and carefully selected to aid and encourage the pupils to educate themselves along literary lines.

Charles Howe, a pioneer of Coos county passed away at his home near Dora on Friday, January 3d. He was born at Panama, Chautauqua county, N. Y., September 28, 1828, crossed the plains to California in 1864.5, and came to Dora in 1867, having lived there for forty years. He lost his first wife, and married Elizabeth Porter in 1867. His wife and nine children survive him.

George Rackleff has taken a position at the bench in C. L. Bender's Jewelry store and Mr. Bender considers himself particularly fortunate in securing his service. Mr. Rackleff has a natural aptitude in the matter of mechanics with a special leaning toward jewelry work. He took a course at a Seattle watchmaker's school, and has since had a year's experience at practical work and is qualified, therefore, to correct the fault and breakages in watches, clocks and Jewelry.

It Does the Business.

Mr. E. E. Chamberlain, of Clinton, Maine, says of Bucklin's Arnica Salve. "It does the business; I have used it for piles and it cured them. Used it for chapped hands and it cured them. Applied it to an old sore and it healed it without leaving a scar behind." 25c. at R. S. Knowlton's drug store.

Death of Dr. D. L. Steele.

D. L. Steele, the pioneer dentist of Coos county, passed away at Bandon, Friday, January 10, 1908, of which his large number of friends will be sorely pained to learn. While the doctor has been ailing for a number of years, and his demise comes as no surprise to his many friends, it is never the less a severe blow.

He leaves a wife to mourn his loss, their only two children a son and daughter, having gone before during the great diphtheria scourge this town experienced, some thirty years ago, and on Saturday his remains were laid beside them in the Masonic cemetery. The funeral being conducted from the Masonic lodge room by his brothers of that fraternity, a large number of whom come from Bandon and other lower river points to be in attendance.
