Series of Accidents

It seems that Coos county's annual epidemic of accidents has made its appearance a little early in the season, but surely seems to be here. As we went to press last week Geo. N. Goodrich was hurt severely at the sawmill in this city. It was at first thought fatally, but the present indications are that he will recover, of which his many friends will be pleased to learn.

On Thursday afternoon C. M. Cavill, a late arrival from Coeur de Alene, Idaho, while getting ready to assist McDuffee & Ford to paint the O. K. Creamery building a mile above town, got a fall from the swinging stage which resulted in his death about twelve hours later. He had only been in town a few days and had worked some with Chas. Matheson on the Nosler building but on Thursday went to help on the other job.

One day the latter part of last week a man by the name of Pickett while offerring from the slab saw in the Adalpbson mill down the coast, was struck by a stick of wood thrown by the saw. The blow was across the body and with such force that he died in a few minutes.

Mrs. Robert Frederick, of Bandon, fell on an uneven walk in that place one day last week and seriously sprained one ankle and fractured one of the bones in the lower limb.

It is reported here that a little son of Chas. Bingaman, of Bandon, was seriously injured while riding with his father in his gasoline boat, by being thrown onto the engine as the boat came in contact with another boat, while the Recorder gives an account of Eugene Pierce getting one of his hands badly mangled in the shingle mill at that place.
