Mrs. A. G. Aiken's Notice to the Public.

Marshfield, Oreg., April 9, 1909.

—On Saturday, April 3rd, '09, I reached Coquille City from Bandon with a stock of millinery, which at first it was my intention to show my old customers there, so that they could select from it what they needed, and that I would return to Marshfield on Monday. When I reached Coquille City however, I found that a lady engaged in the sale of millinery had circulated a report that I had entered into an agreement with her not to sell goods in Coquille City while she was in business.

About twelve years ago I wrote her in substance that if she would purchase the fixtures in a store which I had there and buy a stock of millinery from me, I would not bring goods for sale to Coquille City while she was in business. Shortly after this her husband and herself came to me at Marshfield with an agreement, which had a clause in it that I would not send goods to Coquille City while she was in business, and this I refused to sign. She then purchased her stock of goods from a Mrs. Smith, a milliner at Marshfield at that time, and purchased the fixtures from me for about thirty or thirty-five dollars, therefore there was no agreement made with her.

The store I have opened now however, is of a permanent character and I will aim to keep as good a stock of millinery as can be found in any town in the County and I will give this location personal attention by making frequent visits to the store, in addition to all time to wait on customers.

I am not saying this for the benefit of people who have known me for a great many years as they would not credit any statement of my being guilty of an injustice but as there are a great many new comers who have located in Coquille City and vicinity during the last few years, I thought it but fair to myself, to make this statement in a public way, and therefore I remain,

Very Respectfully,
MRS. A. G. AIKEN.
