Good Cough Remedy for Children and Grown Folks too.

"We could hardly do without Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says Mrs. Flora Despain of Boyd, Ky. "I found it to be so good for croup and have used it for years. I can heartily recommend it for coughs, colds and croup in children and grown folks, too." The above shows the implicit confidence that many mothers place in Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, a confidence based on many years' experience in the use of it. No one need hesitate to use this remedy, for it contains no chloroform, opium or other narcotics and may be given to a child as confidently as to an adult. For sale by R. S. Knowlton.

Winchester Victory at Chicago.

At the Grand American Handicap Tournament, held in Chicago, June 21-26, and participated in by nearly 500 trap shooters, D. A. Upton, of Cleveland, Ohio, won the amateur championship of America; Fred Gilbert, of Spirit Lake, Ia., Frank Fisher, of Eagle Grove, Ia., the preliminary handicap; Fred Gilbert, high average for all targets trapped; and John R. Taylor, of Newark, Ohio, high average for double targets. The grand American handicap resulted in a tie between John R. Livingston, of Springville, Ala.; William Wetleaf, of Nichols, Ia.; George E. Burns, of Cleveland, Ohio, and Fred Shattuck, of Columbus, Ohio. In the shoot-off of the tie, Mr. Shattuck won, scoring 20 targets; Mr. Livingston, who shot from the 19 yard mark, breaking 19. All of the winners except Mr. Shattuck shot Winchester "Leader" shells, and Messrs. Livingston and Burns also shot Winchester Repeating Shotguns. Such a sweeping victory again proves that Red W goods are the ones that help shooters successfully.

SEARCH ABANDONED

Former Coos County Man Lost in Attempt to Scale Mt. Tacoma.

We give below a very good description of the death of T. Y. Callaghan and his friend, Joseph W. Stevens, from the Tacoma Daily Tribune, of August 25th, which will be read with interest by many Coos county people. When the papers first published the incident a mistake was made in Mr. Callaghan's initials and his friends here did not recognize the name as his. Mr. Callaghan was well known here, having come to Coos county upwards of twenty years ago, and while he has traveled a great deal since, he has spent much of his time here. The report reads as follows:

Having deemed it inadvisable to continue longer the search for the bodies of T. Y. Callaghan of West Seattle, and Joseph W. Stevens of Trenton, N. J., who lost their lives on Saturday, August 14th, while attempting to make an ascension of Mount Tacoma, Owen Callaghan, the only brother of one of the missing men, and Dr. H. B. Hinman of Everett, who have been investigating the latest search made for them, came into Tacoma yesterday. Both were returning to their homes, after having remained several days at the scene of the accident, content that the everlasting snows that crest the peak should remain to mark the resting place of the two who were gone.

"It is the best way," said Mr. Callaghan, "I have been over all the ground myself and I could not consent to further lives being risked in the search. I believe that no party could be sent out without directly endangering the lives of every searcher. We could not save the lives which have already been sacrificed and no pretext could excuse the further deliberate risk. If there were any hope of finding my brother and his friend alive, or if it were only a question of expenditure, I would never allow the hunt to cease, but I know that they themselves would not ask that additional useless steps be taken."

DETAILS OF TRAGEDY

Dr. Hinman was spending a vacation at the Camp of the Clouds at the time Callaghan and Stevens arrived there. He and Stevens were both members of the Mystic Shrine, and in the days they were together before the lost men commenced the fatal climb, became fast friends. The Doctor was a participant in all the events succeeding the tragedy, and is familiar with all of its details that will ever be brought to light.

"Mr. Callaghan and Mr. Stevens left the camp early on the morning of the fourteenth to make the long trip to the crater," said Dr. Hinman while in Tacoma. "They took with them a young man, a son-in-law of J. L. Reese, J. T. Shirley. The first intimation we had of their danger was Shirley's return, saying that he had found it impossible to keep up the pace and was forced to signal a goodbye to the other two, who were several hundred yards ahead of him, and come back. His hands were becoming frozen when he started to return, and he told of a bad storm raging near the crater."

"It was too late that night to commence a search for Callaghan and Stevens, and we kept looking for their return. Early in the morning Joe, the elder of the Stampfer brothers, started for Longmire to get a searching party, thinking that they had been forced to seek refuge in one of the steam caves of the crater. With Stampfer were Virgil Chapman and Isaac Brown, of Tacoma, who is an employee of the Northwest Development company. They were out from 9 a. m. to 7:30 p. m., but found no trace of the men.

"The next day Joe Stampfer set out, accompanied by Len, Ben and Late Longmire, Sam Estes, the government ranger; Frank Kandle, William Fogel and a Seattle tourist whose name we have been unable to learn. The first party discovered the alpenstocks carried by the missing men forty-eight paces from Registration rock, but they had not registered. This was the only clue ever found to the place and the occasion of their disappearance. From that point they disappeared entirely.

TWO TENABLE THEORIES

"Two theories are tenable: One that the wind had torn the staffs from their hands or that they had set them down and, in the blinding storm which had arisen, they had lost them. The blizzard was veering steadily toward the White river glacier, and it was probably in that direction that they made their way."

"I will not say that if they had been accompanied by an experienced guide of the mountains they would have been saved if they had started down. It was a physical impossibility for any man to beat back against that storm, but a man who knew the mountain might have located one of the caves in the crater, where they might have lain until morning and escaped with frozen members only."

"The White river glacier is the only one which starts directly from the summit. It sweeps downward and many of its breaks are 1,000 feet in height, with deep crevasses, any one of which the storm-driven men, now completely without bearings or any idea of their location and walking blindly before the tempest, might have stepped into and been lost forever."

In the time that the lost Mr. Callaghan and Dr. Hinman spent together in camp they became intimate friends.

"I found him a most remarkably educated man," remarked the doctor yesterday. "He was never enabled to attend a college or higher school, but he was perfectly familiar with all the advanced mathematics and had worked all of Euclid. He was a lover of the philosophers and the deeper thinkers. I have found him engaged in reading Rousseau and Spencer and Addison. He carried pocket volumes of Plato and his other favorite writers."

LOVE OF NATURE

"He was a wonderful lover of nature and one of the most attentive students. Among his effects this passage from Spencer I find underscored in one of his books: 'It is not, indeed an absurd and almost sacrilegious belief that the more a man studies nature, the less he reveres it?'"

He was a man 51 years old, of the finest type of Irish gentleman, with ruddy face and snowy hair that made him appear much older. He was exceptionally vigorous, however, and had spent seven years in travel, having scaled many of the highest peaks in the Alps and Popocatepetl in Mexico."

T. Y. Callaghan came to Canada from Ireland, where he was born in County Kevin. He located in Stratroy, Ont., when he was a very young man. Coming to Oregon in 1885 he interested himself in the timber business and four years ago owned a thousand acres in that state. Besides his brother, his only living relative is a sister, Mrs. Andrew Reardon, of Minnesota.

JOE STAMPLER'S FLUCK

The home of the other lost man was in Trenton. Little has been learned of his family but he is said to have remarked before his death that his wife died one year ago.

"I am sorry that, through some unfortunate circumstance, Jules Stampfer has been given the great measure of credit in the search which should have gone to his brother, Joe. Joe took out the first searching party and spent two days looking for the lost men without any compensation," said Owen Callaghan yesterday. "He offered to make a complete circuit of the mountain with two companions for nothing, in addition to expenses if I wished it. But I did not think it right to have risked those additional lives. In the first trip one of the men, Virgil Chapman, fell and rolled to within five feet of a crevasse which would have killed him had he not been roped and the same might happen again. It would take five days to bring the bodies out even if they were found, as the crater would have to be completely circled with them."

"I believe that my brother would rather rest where he is than in a man-made grave. He lies in the country and amid the scenes he loved best and no fitter vault could be selected for him than the ice-bound mausoleum of Mount Tacoma."

Cash Prize for Writers.

Portland, Or., Oct. 26—Five thousand dollars will be given by the Portland Commercial Club in prizes for the best newspaper and magazine articles on Portland, the state or the Pacific Northwest. The offer holds good during the coming year and the one writing the best article will be rewarded with a check for $1000. Second best will get $500 and a gradually diminishing scale of prizes will reward 80 writers.

The contest is open to everyone. The conditions are that the articles must be printed in a newspaper or magazine of general circulation, printed anywhere outside of the states of Oregon and Washington. Marked copy of the publication must then be sent to the Portland Commercial Club, where it will be turned over to three judges named by the Governor of Oregon. The articles may be printed between the dates of November 1st, 1909, and December 31st 1910.

Almost any phase of the Northwest may be used as subject matter of the articles. The length and treatment is optional with the writer. The plan of the Commercial Club is not to have the Northwest "boomed" in the common meaning of the term so much as it is to have the people of the country become more familiar with this portion of the United States and give expression to their views in such articles as will be acceptable to papers throughout the entire continent.

The decision of the judges will be absolutely impartial. There are prizes for 30 writers and the chances for winning are so many that entries in the contest should be large. That the publicity resulting from the prize offer will be wide and that much good will be realized for the whole Pacific Northwest is assured.
