BASEBALL

It seems that the Coos county baseball situation has resolved itself into a deadlock. The bone of contention is the number of outside professional players to be allowed on a team. Marshfield, North Bend and Bandon wish to leave that matter wide open and let each town put on as many outsiders as it can afford to pay for, while Coquille and Myrtle Point wish to limit the number to two, or at most three. In case of "no limit" the two towns last named will not come into a league. This would leave the other three up a tree, for a three league team of Bandon, Marshfield and North Bend could not be worked out as a practical proposition.

Looking at the matter from the standpoint of the spectator who likes to see a good ball game but is not interested in the betting ring, it would seem that Coquille and Myrtle Point are right. We have good players among our local boys.

They will put up a game that is really as interesting to the ordinary spectator as game played by a lot of outsiders whom nobody knows and in whom no one feels any personal interest, if not more so. Further, the teams are more likely to be evenly matched. When it comes to be a matter of seeing which town can raise the most cold cash with which to hire a professional team, it is no reflection on the two up-river towns to say that they are not in it with Marshfield, and probably not with Bandon. They are wise to refuse to go into that sort of a competition. And if there is any money in it for the players, it had better go to our local boys than to a lot of imported booze-guzzlers who will lie around the saloons all the week and end up with a big jam Saturday night which will leave them in no condition to play the next day. That has been the prevalent style of outside players seen on the Coos county diamonds in the past and the people have been thoroughly disgusted with that way of life.

Even the man who wishes to risk a few dollars on the result of the game has a better chance for a square deal from the local players, for when a bunch of the hired outsiders go out on the field it is always a question whether the game will be on the square.

If these two towns stand to their guns they will probably carry their point.

Some folks find it cheaper to stop the paper than to pay up.

The North Bend Harbor Commission has turned down Major Kinney's suggestion of maintaining a booster in Portland for turning this way some of the immigration coming into this state. They think it would be unwise to spend any money for that purpose at this time. It is evident that there is no one among the push just now who wants the job.

The Sentinel calls down the Bandon Recorder because the latter asserts that its job department is "better equipped than any other office in the Coquille valley". Is Brother Cates starting in to reform the craft? He must know that the Recorder only used the stock he which is the common property of all printers. Probably the Sentinel uses it, too, on the sly, although they all ought to know that the Herald office is the best equipped of any in the valley.

The Herald has been handed a copy of still another Bandon publication, entitled "Justice" and published by Dr. B. K. Leach

Being a Socialist, Dr. Leach naturally has a fight on with all defenders of the established order, and he seems to have the nerve to go down in his pocket to propagate his ideas. That is the trouble with those Socialist fellows; they are willing to spend money for the dissemination of what they believe to be right principles, and they do not always look first to see how that particular money is going to get back into their pockets again. This makes it difficult to "stamp out" their heresies, as will be seen by the stand-patters with increasing frequency as time passes.

A. S. Hammond takes issue with the Oregonian when that paper speaks in a complimentary way of Theodore Roosevelt and proceeds to lambast the colonel in the most approved stand-pat style. He says that he once believed in Roosevelt. No doubt. All the old-timers believed in Roosevelt as long as he could be used as a cog in the machine and his great personal popularity could be prostituted to the uses of the Gang. Hammond says: "I have lost all faith in him." Sure thing. All of the push lost faith in Roosevelt at about the same time—when he would no longer "stand in." But when Hammond presumes to speak for the people he is amusing. If he were to speak for the people of Taft he would probably represent that well-meaning old smoothbore as a popular idol.

NOTES ON THE PHOTOPLAYS

Of Interest to Those Who Patronize the Movies

While no absolutely great pictures have been shown here recently, many good ones have been seen, and the average has been high.

Charming Mabel Trunelle, who hasn't been seen in licensed pictures for over a year, has returned to the Edison company and will be seen at the Scenic tonight for the first time since her return. This is good, in fact, bully.

Maurice Costello has been seen in several pictures in which his work was fine, and his two little daughters, Dolores and Helen, the two sweetest little fairies on the screen, have both appeared with him.

The fifth installment of "What Happened to Mary" included scenes taken in England on the visit made there last fall for that purpose by some of the Edison players including Mary Fuller Miriam Nesbitt and Marc McDermott. "Fog" recently shown here, in which those three players appeared, was also taken on the other side, and others will follow.

Itch! Itch! Itch!

Constant Itch. Intolerable agony. ECZEMA! A few drops of a mild, simple, wash— instant relief—all skin distress GONE.

had ever seen a Chinaman, that it was amusing. Then, the film shown here had evidently seen its best days before the war; and to finish the thing off in proper shape the title had been lost off and the operator made a bad guess and ran the last reel second and the second reel last.

On account of the delay in the arrival of the Breakwater, the Scenic was obliged to use some repeaters on Saturday and Sunday nights. They were good, however, and one in particular was well worth seeing the second time. This was the Vitagraph, "Two Men and Two Women," with Julia Swayne Gordon and Edith Storey, Earle Williams and Harry Northrup in the cast, making one of the best dramatic pictures seen here in months.
