THE OLD COMEDY

The old comedy stunt called "Stopping the Paper" was pulled off in the Herald office several times last week. It wasn't any surprise, however. It will be remembered by the subscribers who happened to read the editorials in the last issue that some criticism was made of a petition that had been circulated in town. Fault was found with this petition on two counts; first, because it departed very far from the truth by representing moral conditions here to be at least ten times worse than they are, and that if these slanderous false statements should be circulated on the outside it would certainly tend to keep any desirable class of citizens from coming here to live; second, because the writers of the petition, wishing to refer to a "case" which had been the subject of street talk but in which no public official action had been taken, evidently lacked the nerve to mention the man involved by name, but were so far lost to any proper sense of decency as to bring in the name of the girl to be bandied about where ever the petition should be read, whether the case were ever prosecuted or not.

That these considerate gentleman were anxious to have the petition carrying this girl's name given as wide publicity as possible is shown by the fact that the petition was brought to this office and that the suggestion was made that we publish it, as the other paper was going to publish it. It is gratifying to note that the editor of the Sentinel, in publishing the petition, sidesteps the young lady's name.

But get back to the comedy: We didn't know the name of a single one of the writers or circulators of the petition—though we had seen two of the latter in action—but we were not to remain forever in ignorance. The paper came out Tuesday evening. About 9 o'clock Wednesday morning the Rev. F. H. Adams paid this office a pleasant call, paid his subscription and ordered the paper stopped. Now we had never sized this gentleman up as pinhead and it really didn't occur to us to put two and two together, so we inadvertently and innocently asked him if he was going away. (If that wasn't comedy, what was it?) His reply that he wasn't but he didn't want the paper any more, sent us back with redoubled industry to the task of writing a receipt for 50 cents, and a great calm fell over the office. Taking his receipt, Mr. Adams departed, but it was only a few minutes until he came back in some excitement, having lost his receipt already. As it seemed possible that this might be the first subscription receipt he ever had and he wanted to keep it as a curiosity, he was cheerfully given a duplicate.

No further cataclysms overtook the paper Wednesday morning but bright and early Thursday morning the Rev. C. H. Cleaves blew breezily in, paid up and ordered his paper stopped. We didn't ask him if he was going away.

He had scarcely departed when one who announced himself as Dr. Hoag, and who had been one of the circulators of the petition, came in with a blank check in his hand. This he filled out for the amount of his bill, ordered his card out of the paper and the paper stopped, and made his getaway before the moral atmosphere of this office could get in its deadly work on him, declining to wait for a receipt.

At this writing it seems that the comedy may be confined to the three acts, which will be perfectly satisfactory to the management.

MORE COMEDY

Surely the woods were full of comedy last week. What could be more in the line of a farce than this: Circuit court being about to convene, certain guardians of the public morals, who evidently believe in the efficacy of hunting ducks with a brass band, get up a petition representing moral conditions in this town to be something so rank that no decent people would conceivably want to come here.

They refer to a case of alleged attempted assault about which rumors have been rife on the street; and in referring to this case they have neither the courage to use the man's name nor the decency to refrain from using the girl's. They direct this to District Attorney Brown and the members of the grand jury. They get out and rustle up a lot of signatures from people who evidently do not fully realize that they are giving their own town a certificate of deep moral degradation when they sign it. Then a bunch of them go solemnly before the grand jury—what for? To assist the grand jury in ferreting out some of the high crimes and misdemeanors which they assert are so common? To offer some evidence which would be good in a court of law for the conviction of a criminal? To tell the grand jury of some one who would be able to give evidence in some of the cases which these people are talking about? Oh, no! None of these things. To present the petition. To assure Prosecuting Attorney Brown and the members of the grand jury that they need not be afraid to go ahead and perform their duty; to assure them of "our sympathy and support;" "as an expression of public sentiment conceived for the sole purpose of encouraging and assisting" them in the performance of their sworn duty. If a single one of these men told the grand jury one solitary thing that would be of any assistance whatever to it in the performance of its duties: if a valuable suggestion was made by one of the visitors; if it was, in fact, anything but a grand stand play the fact has not leaked out of the jury room. Where, then does the comedy come in? Why partly in the immense seriousness with which these people have gone through their little stunt; in their solemn visit to assure the prosecuting attorney THEY are behind him; in their failure to sense the fact that the mere assumption that he needs such jacking up would be a reflection on him if it came from people who knew what they were about; in the ignoring of Deputy Prosecuting Attorney Liljeqvist, who, is the most energetic, efficient, honest and fearless attorney who has ever occupied the position of prosecutor in Coos county, and the going over his head to his chief—because Liljeqvist does not tell everything he knows to every old granny who comes to him; in the assumption that the members of the grand jury—solid citizens drawn from different parts of the county—are asking for the "sympathy and support" of a few residents of this town to give them the requisite courage and energy for the performance of their duty, or that they would look with anything but somewhat annoyed tolerance at any such antics. More comedy might be seen in the utter unconsciousness of these people that the case that was causing them the mental perturbation had been all lined up by Mr. Liljeqvist long before they got so busy with their petition; that he knew exactly what he was about all of the time, and when the time came for the grand jury to take up the case it was taken up and disposed of with neatness and dispatch, and their great hullabaloo end no figure in the matter, one way or the other—neither accelerated nor retarded the movement of justice by an hour.

Let no one suppose, because The Herald criticizes certain methods of fighting immoral tendencies, that the paper is not entirely in sympathy with every rational attempt to find a solution for the evils which beset us. No one can enlist in a more worthy cause than that of throwing every possible safeguard around the purity, innocence and virtue of our young people. But it is useless to blink the fact that the problem is the most complicated that confronts us today. The solution does not lie in the staging of a periodical comic opera just before the meeting of the circuit court. While that may bring a certain degree of fame, and even of commendation to the actors, it does not touch the underlying cause. On the contrary, it does tend to familiarize the people with the idea that the whole fabric of society is rotten; that fractures of the moral law are so common that he or she who offends is only following the general example. No belief could be worse with which to inoculate the minds of the rising generation. Let young people once become convinced that every one else is freely partaking of forbidden fruit, and they conclude that it would be no worse for them than for others. A descendant of the monkey, man is still an imitative animal and prone to do as he thinks others are doing. An evil example will offset many good precepts, especially with young people whose characters are not fully formed. For this reason, a grand burrah to the effect that immorality is the rule, instead of the exception, does infinitely more harm than good.

That every one should hold courts and officers in the enforcement of law goes without saying. The restraining influence on others of the swift and certain punishment of convicted offenders is beyond calculation. As the chances of immunity increase the boldness of the would-be offender grows, but very few would care to go up against the certainty of punishment. It is the uncertainty that offers encouragement to those of evil propensities. So it is gratifying to see the energy and fearlessness with which Deputy Prosecuting Attorney Liljeqvist and the grand jury have taken hold of the cases brought to their attention. May nothing block a conviction in the case of any guilty one, and may the punishment imposed be a salutary warning to other unprincipled scoundrels, so that where moral stamina is lacking the fear of consequences may take its place.

The ministers of Marshallfield seem to have taken a sensible stand in the matter of raising the moral standard of that town. They have held a private conference with the members of the city council and amicably discussed ways and means of clearing out some of the vice with which the place is afflicted. It is understood that the meeting was harmonious and that all agreed that a change for the better was greatly to be desired. It is stated that one result of the conference will be that instead of devoting all their attention to the fallen women, the administration will now turn its attention to ridding the town of a lot of their male parasites. This is well, for far below the scale of the unfortunate women are the things in the guise of men who live on the wages of their degradation. It is too bad that the law seems unable to inflict any worse punishment than the enforcement of the mandate to "move on."

Twelve questions will be submitted from which the pupil may choose ten.
If the pupil has a garden or has done any creditable work in agriculture, the teacher may give 30 per cent for such work. In this case the pupil need answer only seven questions of the ten submitted.
If a pupil falls low in this subject, the county superintendent may add not more than 25 per cent for a creditable exhibit at a county, district or state fair.
