Alleged Discovery of A Simple Cancer Cure

(Coos Bay Times)

That clam juice is a cure for cancer is the belief of H. C. Diers and W. J. Rust, who cite two instances of cures on Coos Bay. While they don't pretend to rank with Dr. Friedmann as a medical authority, they declare that they have witnessed effective cures with the clam juice. Whether there is any similarity in the medical properties of clam juice and turtle serum is a problem that they are wondering about.

H. C. Diers says that about six years ago Abe Van Zile, of North Bend, was suffering from a cancer on the finger and tried in vain to have it cured. He was figuring on going to Chicago to have specialists treat him. One day Van Zile and others went out for clams and got quite a few. Van Zile insisted on cleaning his own clams. While he was working with them the clam juice got into the injury. He felt intense pain for a while, but soon it began to cure and before long entirely disappeared.

Another one, Messrs. Diers and Rust cite, is A. Hemingway, who was suffering from a cancer of the lip, which some had told him was incurable. He started digging clams and eating them, and before long the cancer began to heal and has long since disappeared.

Mr. Diers said that he called the attention of some physicians to it but they only laughed at him. The use of turtle serum as a cure for consumption by Dr. Friedmann caused him to recall it and wonder if there really isn't a wonderful cure in the clam.

State Game Warden Urges Organization

Special effort is being made by State Game Warden, William L. Finley, to organize the sportsmen in every community throughout the State. In many places, organizations have been formed and good results have been secured.

"In order to carry out the work that has been outlined by the State Board of Fish and Game Commissioners, and to have our fields and forests abounded in game and our streams stocked with fish, it is very necessary that we have the active assistance of sportsmen in different parts of the State," says Mr. Finley.

"The object of these sportsmen's clubs is to assist the Commission in planting trout and other game fish in the various creeks and rivers, and to release different varieties of game birds which are now being raised at the State Game Farm in places where they will thrive and do well. We intend to do this distributing of fish and game birds through the sportsmen's organizations."

Another object of having the sportsmen organized is to secure a better sentiment in certain localities in favor of game protection. It is impossible to secure the enforcement of game laws unless the citizens of any locality are in favor of such enforcement.

It is planned to have at least one or several such organizations in every county in the State. A general convention of sportsmen is to be held next October or November, at which time delegates will assemble from all over the State. An active campaign will be begun to make Oregon one of the greatest hunting and fishing grounds in the country. It is contended that this will be an attractive advertisement and a drawing card for a desirable class of tourists who have money to spend and money to invest. Game protection and game propagation is a business proposition, not only for the man who lives in the city, but for the farmer, the fruit grower and the timberman.

Mayor Straw Has Good Idea for Coos Exhibit

(Coos Bay Times)

At a meeting of the Marshfield Chamber of Commerce, Mayor Straw expounded a vision that he had regarding the Coos and Curry exhibit at the Panama Exposition. He said that he wanted to see the two counties erect a building at the exposition, every bit of the materials in which would be products of the two counties. Then he said they could conduct a restaurant in connection with the exhibit that would serve anyone anything they wished and that all the products would be raised on Coos county soil. The wood and coal for fuel would come from its forests and mines, the wheat, buckwheat and corn table dishes would be products of its fields, the bread and cakes would be made from its grains, fruit and vegetables of all kinds could be raised here and even tea could be grown here to serve. With the exception of coffee, he said there wasn't anything produced anywhere in the United States but could be produced in Coos county. He said that even venison and other game, including fish, could be served from Coos county as a special permit could be secured for it. His idea was referred to the committee in charge of the exposition.

BOYS' SECRETARY TELLS SOME TRUTH

Says Some Rankly Immodest Styles of Dress Worn by Girls Are the Cause of Much Moral Delinquency of the Young

(From The Woman's Journal)

Under the title, "The Girl Part of The Boy Problem," Eugene C. Foster, City Secretary for Boys in the Detroit Y. M. C. A., calls attention to a real danger, caused by women's thoughtless following of styles which they did not invent, but which they ought not to countenance. Mr. Foster says:

The growing boy has been under the searchlight of investigation in a remarkable way, especially within the last ten years.

One of the most significant things that has been brought home to us with emphasis is the fact that the problems of boyhood are intricately involved with other relationships, and not the least of these is the relationship of the boy and the girl.

OVERSEES 30,000 BOYS

It is my privilege to do my thinking in terms of thirty thousand boys times when his own thoughts are far from the realm of ungentlemanly conduct, and perhaps with no desire on her part to arouse such interest.

HE LOST HIS FIGHT

The seventeen-year-old boy who sat in my office a few nights ago and recounted the struggles of a young man to keep himself pure was, unfortunately, but a type of many; and the girl of chance street acquaintance who caused him to lose his fight is but a type, too. That is sad enough; but one bows his head in shame when the boy says: "How did I know she wasn't decent? Hundreds of girls on the streets dress and act as she did."

GOOD AND BAD DRESS ALIKE

A man of considerable experience recently designated a certain country hotel as a "low resort." He was promptly challenged by ancencies in dress as he walks a few blocks in the heart of a city! Will he win or lose?

BAD STYLES SPECIFIED

I do not write as a fashion critic; I write as a man who daily faces the moral issues raised by these things. But I want to be specific. There are prevailing styles of dress which are offensively immodest. Among these are the tight-fitting waist; the "peek-a-boo" waist, in its really offensive forms (a common object of jest, while it goes on sowing seed for its unhallowed harvest); some styles of low neck and short sleeves which many girls affect; many forms of tight-fitting skirts; certain types of hosiery. The list might easily be made longer; it is merely used by way of illustration.

Women are crying out because of the libertines among our men. I believe their cries rise to heaven, and that heaven weeps over the shame of it. But I say without hesitation that these prevailing styles of dress are losing the passions of countless thousands of growing boys, whose physical fight is already severe.

WOMEN DO HARM INNOCENTLY

When will women understand? I make no charge of indecent design against thousands of women whose thoughts and lives are far above such a thing. Granted that they are above such thoughts; will they not listen to those who know these things?

SOME TYPICAL INSTANCES

Two girls of irreproachable character passed me on the street a day or two since; they were dressed conspicuously, and, I should say, immodestly. The crossing policeman caught the eye of a teamster and winked, and the teamster replied with a sneering smile. The girls never knew of the estimate those two men placed on them.

Just ahead of me walked a young woman whose face, apart from her costume, betokened refinement; but her dress was of the extreme close-fitting type, with low neck and short sleeves. Young men behind me spoke in the coarsest terms of her; others stopped and stared; still others turned about and walked in her direction to get a better look. Apparently she was unconscious that with her appearance on the street the ideals of womanhood were lowered in the minds of many men.

RICH GIRLS SET PACE

But it does not stop there. These women of better circumstances set the pace absolutely for the girl of small wages. The girl may have no home to which her friends may be invited; her social effort is expended in her dress. She follows the prevailing fashion of immodesty; she inflames the passions of the young men she meets; she may not be sheltered and safeguarded; and she is swept under.

IS A WOMAN'S PROBLEM

Is there a cure for it all? It is a woman's problem. If going to the extreme in dress is more important in the eyes of womankind than safeguarding the pathway of sons, brothers and husbands, then it will continue. But those who see it as it is must raise their voices in protest.

The Coquille-Marshfield Road

(Coos Bay News)

F. P. Norton, supervisor of Road Dist. No. 5, lately completed the railroad crossing at Flagstaff, and at present has six teams working on the cut at Eagle Point and the one a short distance south of there. The road to Coquille will be put in thorough repair immediately as far as Shinglehouse slough, which is the end of district 5. The Coquille road then goes into district 9, of which Taylor Siglin is supervisor, and from the limit of that district at the Summit it passes through district 15, with John Yoakam as supervisor, and enters Coquille in district 16, which is in charge of Chas. Strang. These supervisors have all got forces of men at work, repairing the road, and it will soon be in excellent condition for autos. Mr. Norton will also make necessary repairs on the road from Marshfield to Eastport and the Newport mine.

"Lest We Forget"

in the teen age, the entire boyhood of a great city. Not that I have relationships with any such number; but, along with definitely constructive duties, I am set as a watchman upon the wall to sound the alarm when any danger seems to menace the boyhood life of the community. This charge makes me of necessity a student of boyhood life in large cities, and I have in mind to write with earnest frankness concerning a new menace.

A NEW MENACE

I refer to the prevailing manner of dress among women, more especially as seen upon our city streets. I have no hesitation in saying that it is not alone immodest, but immoral.

Never, until lately, have I known a time when in thoroughfares devoted to shopping or business, a procession of girls sweep past a young man in dress so vulgar that he might fairly—even though mistakenly—assume that they are on parade to invite his advances. The dress of the girl of today causes her to be thrust upon him, perhaps at other, who happened to be a circuit court judge. The first man defended his criticism by citing the women who were seen at this hotel; whereupon the judge remarked: "You are wrong. The women who go there go with their husbands, and are the respectable matrons of the community. You fail to make allowance for the present immodesty in women's dress; an immodesty which causes me to be ashamed to meet some of my most respected women acquaintances on the street."

Right here is the crux of the difficulty. If only immodest women and girls dressed in vulgar fashion, the line would be sharply drawn. But this immodest dress prevails among all classes.

MAKE IT HARD FOR BOYS

Those of us who give our lives to boys find no harder task than to help the boy in his battle to keep pure. Imagine such a boy, fighting such a terrific battle as only a man can appreciate, confronted not once but a hundred times with inde-
