Opens Headquarters To Promote Publicity

During his stay in Portland, Major Kinney launched a new publicity scheme for Coos and Curry counties and the southern part of the state. He organized the Southern Oregon Publicity Headquarters and has with him the lease of a fine room for its occupancy. This is situated at 45 Third street, in the Multnomah hotel, and has 70 feet of glass, 40 feet in the hotel rotunda. This headquarters will be opened on June 15 and it is intended that it shall contain a general exhibit for the southern Oregon counties and be made, as it name implies, publicity headquarters for this part of the state, giving information to the thousands of people who come to Portland seeking a location in Oregon, and turning a stream of desirable citizens in our direction.

A. A. Wright, who has spent years as assistant manager of the Portland hotel, will be publicity manager, L. D. Kinney will be publicity director, and his daughter, Miss Annie M. Kinney will be corresponding secretary, being a very competent young lady.

We are all more or less familiar with Major Kinney's ability as a real estate man, and corroborative evidence was given by H. M. Abbott, a banker and hotel man, who told Mr. Wright that he had known L. D. Kinney for over twenty years, and had heard the expressions of able men, and he said unhesitatingly that Kinney was the most artistic advertiser of city real estate in the United States. This new venture will give the Major a chance to exercise his extraordinary gift to good advantage to this part of Oregon, and if he receives the proper co-operation from the people here he can do Coos county a world of good.

JAPANESE IN CALIFORNIA

Sidelights on the Problem With Which Our Neighbors on the South are Dealing in New Anti-Alien Law

Collier's Weekly has a long article by Peter Clark Macfarlane, a special writer sent by that paper to California to write up the Japanese situation as he found it. As the people of Oregon seem to have little conception of the seriousness of the problem with which the people of California are struggling--a problem which, if not dealt with, would soon confront all the people of the coast, we give below a few extracts from the Macfarlane report:

Just at the moment the classic instance of Japanese agrarian aggression is the town of Florin, which is but eight miles southeast of Sacramento, and therefore an object lesson right at the doors of the legislature. The proponents of the Anti-Alien Land Bill took great pleasure in showing Mr. Bryan by means of this community exactly what the Japanese invasion meant. Florin is the center of a beautiful little vine and berry growing district comprising about twenty-four sections of land. A dozen years ago

There is a fruit-basket factory in the town. It formerly employed white help; but when Secretary Bryan walked into this factory he found forty Japanese employed, the foreman being the only white man about. Apparently about half of the employees were women. Some of them had their babies by their sides. As we were preparing to take a picture a woman with a baby rushed out, but she could not take the crib with her. These employees are now all Japanese, while formerly they were all white because, as the manager informed me, so many whites had moved away to avoid Japanese neighbors that he was compelled to employ some Japanese and then the remaining whites began to ooze out because they would not work in the same factory with the Japanese.

We went around to the neat little two-room schoolhouse, presided over by two charming young women--typical American rural school-teachers--and found in the Florin they have done to a greater or less degree in the fruit-growing districts of Solano, of Santa Cruz and Placer counties, and in the vegetable-growing delta district at the confluence of the Sacramento and the San Joaquin Rivers.

Once a foothold was gained, the Japanese colonization operated to the exclusion of the whites in two ways. The first was by forcing the whites out of employment upon the soil. The extent of this crowding out was startlingly revealed by an investigation conducted in 1909 by the State of California into the relation of the Japanese population to agricultural operation.

This commission visited 4,102 farms scattered over twenty six counties. It found 1,733 of these farms operated by Japanese either as owners or lessees. On these Japanese-operated farms 96 per cent of the labor employed was Japanese. Of the 2,369 farms, 53.4 per cent of the labor was white, 36.4 per cent was Japanese, and the remaining 10.2 per cent was Chinese, Mexican, Hindu, and Indian.

In other words the coming of Japanese into possession or control of the farms of a given community occasions a reduction of white labor employed by approximately 90 per cent--which practically means obliteration.

The second blighting effect is through social pressure. There is little use to argue or speculate over whether the two races should dwell together in brotherly affection. The fact is that they will not.

The Japanese--without meaning any disrespect to the little brown man--does not commend himself to the average American farmer family as a desirable neighbor. He is not overly clean. He is accused of being unmoral. It is claimed the Japanese have no marriage tie as we know the institution. Women, if scarce, may be held pretty much in common. The white farmer's wife does not run in and sit down to gossip with the Japanese farmer's wife and she does not want the Japanese farmer's wife running into gossip with her. Their children cannot play together. Jenny Brown cannot go for a buggy ride with Harry Hirada. The whole idea of social intercourse between the races is absolutely unthinkable. It is not that the white agriculturist cannot compete with the Japanese agriculturist. It is that he will not live beside him.

One on Smith

O. F. Smith, a photographer, recently from Grants Pass, was at Bandon recently. He went out on the jetty to see two fishing boats come in and to get some snap shots of them as they crossed the bar. Before they were near enough for his purpose they got into trouble, and he became absorbed in watching their struggle with the waves. Finally, he came to himself and thought of his camera just in time to get it into action for a snap at the boats at the moment that one of them capsized. He was somewhat chagrined, later, to discover that in the excitement he had forgotten to pull the slide, and the plate was a blank. The picture would have been worth some money.

Road Improving

J. L. Laird, proprietor of the Roseburg-Myrtle Point stage line, was in town one day last week. He says that they are now running autos from Myrtle Point to Roseburg, and are making it through in about eleven hours going out and a little longer coming in, when they are loaded with mail. The road through the canyon is fairly dry but very rough. It is not so bad this side of the Coos county line, but on the Douglas county side it is much worse. Mr. Laird is inclined to be pessimistic about the prospects of Douglas county going right to work on her end of the road. He says that has been the talk for a long time, but nothing has come of it. It is to be hoped that Douglas will fool him once, this time.
