NOTES ON THE PHOTOPLAYS

Of Interest to Those Who Patronize the Movies

Francis X. Bushman, the popular player who disappeared from the Eastern Essanay pictures some time ago, is back with the company, and every one is glad.

"Little Mary" Pickford, who left the pictures to accept a position with Belasco as leading lady in "A Good Little Devil," is to appear in a filmed picture of that play.

Another bunch of good players have left the licensed companies and gone to the independents, including Leah Baird and Rosemary Theby, from the Vitaphone; also Mary Charleson from the Western Vitaphone, and some others.

Any one who does not realize the superiority of our American players over the foreign ones had a chance to see it demonstrated in the Pathe French picture of Romeo and Juliet, shown at the Seaside last week. The lady may have given the French conception of the character of Juliet, but no American can understand how Romeo could have killed himself over a thing like that. She went through the whole play with never the slightest change of facial expression. She was like nothing else so much as a female wooden Indian taking an occasional whirl at a muscade dance.

G. J. Lemanski has leased the Star theater in North Bend to M. A. Quartermass, who has been in the show business before. The Star uses the independent service, the same as the Royal of this city.

The first of the "Belinda Series," put out by the Vitaphone company, was shown at the Seaside Saturday night, and the installments to come will be watched for with interest by all who saw this one. Norma Talmage had already established herself as the most attractive "sweet young girl" on the screen, but in the part of the green slaved she certainly put one over on us, and showed a remarkable versatility. Keep your eye on that young lady; she will go to the top.

Two Remarkable Cures

(Port Orford Tribune)

Fred Caughell and wife returned from Bandon Friday, where the former has been undergoing treatment for his health. Mr. Caughell returned apparently in the best of health, and his cure is a little short of the marvelous. When he went to Bandon some two weeks ago he was a chronic sufferer with stomach trouble and his ailment had reached an acute stage where doctors said that an operation for appendicitis was necessary. Being told by a friend of a practitioner in Bandon who had made many cures, where operations seemed imperative, by a magnetic treatment, Mr. Caughell went to him for an examination. Without asking any questions the doctor told him where his pains were and what his trouble was, and undertook to cure him. Under his treatment Mr. Caughell gained 1½ lbs. a day, and returned on his way to his home at Gold Beach looking well and feeling well and with his organs performing their natural functions without the stimulation of medicine—something they had refused to do for months. This case is something parallel to that of Louie Marsh, who was given up to die by attending physicians, when his case was turned over to a Christian Scientist practitioner. The first night after the change the young man slept his first restful sleep in weeks and awoke in the morning hungry. From that time on his improvement was marked, and after falling away from 196 to less than 100 lbs. he has gained again until he now weighs 160 and is running around out doors and gaining steadily.

Good School at Bridge

By County Supt. Baker

A recent visit to the thriving little town of Bridge revealed something of the possibilities of the consolidated rural school. The history of this school in the past has been that of most one-room country schools, poor equipment, inadequate building and a constant change of teachers making any permanent improvement impossible. At last the spirit of progress seized the community, a considerable territory was united into one district, and a three-room school house was built. The board was fortunate in its selection of teachers the past year, and as a result the school has already taken rank with the very best in the county. The discipline has been firm but kind, the work thoroughly done, and the children have been so much interested in their studies that the per cent of attendance for the year has been 93 although many live at a considerable distance, and the roads are just Coos county roads. One girl has walked 3½ miles to school and maintained a high rank in her classes. The enrollment has been growing so rapidly that a third teacher is likely to be needed within a year or two.

An excellent water system is now being installed, with a concrete reservoir, a large tank mounted on a derrick, and a gasoline engine to pump the water into the tank. The water will be piped about a quarter of a mile to the school house, where sanitary drinking fountains will be placed. The school ground is large and well fenced, and will be properly graded in the near future.

The board has recognized the conscientious work done by the teachers the past year in a substantial way, and for the next year will pay the principal, C. E. Mulkey, $100 per month, and the assistant, Miss Irene Weekly, $65 per month if she has the first four grades only, and $70 per month if she has the fifth grade also. Every one in the community is satisfied, and with the advantages of a good school, a church, one of the largest Sunday schools in the county, two stores, a creamery, a blacksmith shop, and rich agricultural resources, Bridge is becoming known as a desirable place to which to move and raise a family without the expense of sending the children away to school, and as a result is beginning to attract new settlers.

The school board of the Moon district, No. 22, has recently adopted the plan for an up-to-date one-room school house, using the design recommended by Ex Supt. Fairchild, of Kansas, as the model one for rural schools. This building will have the latest methods of lighting and ventilation, the light being admitted only from the left side and the rear, with adequate cloak rooms and library. It is time the old "box car" type of school buildings was abandoned, and this school board is to be commended for its progressive spirit.

The county school superintendent has secured several good plans for rural school houses, and will be glad to show them to any school board considering the erection of a new building. It is time the old school houses, built 30 or 40 years ago, were abandoned for others more in harmony with the splendid homes found in our best farming sections.

CURRY COUNTY CULLINGS

(From the Port Orford Tribune)

A caravan of six teams of emigrants passed up the coast last Saturday.

Michael Horner, of Hare, had the misfortune to have his leg broken below the knee last week by having one of his team horses fall on it when he was repairing a narrow piece of road.

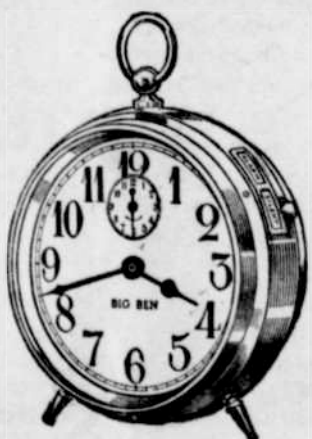

George Forty has made four trips to the rocks with his gasoline boat, hunting sea lions, during the past week and each time has returned with all the hides that he and his four helpers can handle. About 30 lions make a good day's skinning on the rocks for this many men, and gives them another day's work on shore salting hides and taking care of the trimmings.

At the annual school meeting in Port Orford Monday, Hon. J. D. Loucks was elected director for the term of three years and Mrs. Ella Knapp, clerk, for one year. The school board was unanimously instructed to confer with the districts on Sixes and Elk river in regard to establishment of a union high school at Port Orford.

There are about ninety men employed at Brookings and work is progressing nicely. The continuous bombing caused by the blasting of rock for the construction of the railway sounds like the booming of cannons.

Petrol Bros., of Chetco, who have the Blake ranch leased, met with quite a bad accident a few days ago in driving their dairy cows across a bridge about 50 feet long and 30 feet high. The bridge broke down, instantly killing three of their best cows and seriously injuring two others. The loss is estimated at three hundred dollars.

Visits Schools

School Inspector Golden returned Friday from a visit to the schools at McKinley and the Moon district on the upper North fork. He says that the latter is the third richest district in the county, in the matter of assessed valuation, and a new and modern school house will be built this summer. A summer school is in progress, though its usefulness is somewhat hampered by a divided sentiment in the district. At McKinley all is serene and a summer school is doing good work in charge of Prof. Brown, teacher of the 8th grade at Myrtle Point.

Myrtle Point Pointers

On the 14th Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Jackson and two children came in via Roseburg from Seattle, to visit with Mrs. Jackson's relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Arrington. They will stay a month or more.

Dr. and Mrs. John L. Masson went to Bandon on Friday. Mrs. Masson to receive treatment at the hospital, where she will be operated on. She has been poorly for some time.

Mrs. Maud Chase from below Coquille, visited the past week with Mrs. Michaels' family on the "Wilson" place.

Mrs. M. Lee and daughters are visiting relatives on the North Fork at present.

A great many strangers are continually coming in town. The river bank is lined with campers for a mile west of town and though a good many new houses are going up all are rented before they are finished.

On the 14th Mr. and Mrs. Ed Rackliff had a new son added to their family.
