The Myrtle Point Enterprise takes a whack at the Sentinel in its last issue; and incidently at the Herald, for what it pleased to term "knocking" Myrtle Point. The knocking done by the Herald consisted in proving that the Portland Journal was wrong in publishing an interview which stated that every house in Myrtle Point had been built in the last 38 years, and that the Enterprise was wrong in stating that the place was not known as Myrtle Point until after 1880. It would seem that, in the interest of historical accuracy, the Enterprise would acknowlege its error, but it hasn't seemed to be able to rise to that height. As an addition to the above, the Enterprise man might jot down in his mental store house of facts the further particulars that the first paper of any description in Coos county to use a cylinder press was the Coquille Herald, and that the first paper on the Coquille side of the divide to install a typesetting machine was the Coquille Valley Sentinel. And with all due admiration for the dazzeling nerve of any one who puts in a linotype with which to set all the type on a paper the size of the Enterprise, the prophecy is made right here that in the course of a month or two the man who did it will wish in his beart that the machine was in Boston and he had one exactly like the one with which brother Cates is quietly and easily setting a paper just twice, and sometimes three times the size of the Myrtle Point paper.

light. You see I'm displaying the goods under the clear white rays of this wonderful new General Electric Mazda Lamp. It's really the equivalent of daylight, and that's why all up-to-date stores are using it. Of course there are also other vital reasons, one of which is this: the G-E Mazda Lamp gives twice the light of the ordinary carbon incandescent lamp-and costs less to burn. The invention of the Mazda Lamp has caused thousands of people to have their houses and stores wired for electric light. If you are not now using it, come in for a moment to-day and let us prove to your entire satisfaction that this wonderful new lamp has made electric light as cheap as it is convenient.
