CRAWFORD'S REPORT

As was confidently expected by every one who is acquainted with the sort of level head which ornaments the solid shoulders of Attorney General Crawford, that gentleman's report of the result of his investigations of the Coos county deportations practically exonerates the people of the county from the charge of wrong-doing, and clears Sheriff Gage of the accusation of a wilful neglect of duty. It also shows that Al Powers, far from being the "king pin" in the proceedings, took no part in the deportations.

Touching the cause of the deportations, Mr. Crawford says: "The difficulty arose over the assembling of the I. W. W. in Coos county last year, and a series of accidents in the logging camps and mills, which were attributed to them," continues the report. "These accidents consisted of spikes being driven into logs, resulting in the ruin of saws in the mills, the endangering of life; and in the rails of logging roads being oiled, causing logging trains to run away and thereby endangering life. This is but a sample of the accidents which occurred during the year. These, together with the doctrines preached by the I. W. W. orators caused a feeling of fear and unrest among the people."

This is the exact truth of the matter, and the attorney general continues with equal truth: "These were the causes that led up to deportation of the I. W. W. Dr. Leach published a pamphlet called 'Justice,' and his deportation followed because of his advocacy of I. W. W. doctrines and his attack on mill owners and merchants. Deportation was resorted to because of fear on the part of the people of the I. W. W., and because attorneys had advised that there was no law covering the situation."

Of course this kind of a report is not what the governor was looking for. He has apparently made up his mind that certain citizens of Coos county ought to be prosecuted, and while he sent the attorney general here ostensibly to investigate the facts, it seems evident that he really sent his legal representative here to prosecute somebody, whether or no. It is the opinion of many who profess to know what they are talking about that the governor is after Sheriff Gage's scalp, and no report from anybody that does not show that officer to have been derelict in duty will be satisfactory to West. It is the opinion of the Herald that the barn has not yet been erected on the side of which the sheriff's hide will be tacked.

Our worthy governor is "all right" in more ways than one, and when he gets off on the right foot he would accomplish lots of good—if he would only stay with any one proposition till he carried it to a conclusion. Now he proposes to have a special prosecutor come down here and prosecute somebody, and he intends to make the probe wide enough to take in everybody involved. He is certainly laying out a big job for somebody, and if he carries out his threat it will mean endless trouble and expense, to the considerable profit of his salaried man, but to the loss and annoyance of everybody else.

While the governor launches his wrath against the I. W. W. who were responsible for the deportations committed in the way of driving spikes into logs, gouging railroad tracks and other murderous outrages, any sensible man knows how much chance there is of bringing these criminals to justice. The real object of the laws vengeance are the citizens who rose and put an end to the unbearable conditions which prevailed in the industrial field of this section, not forgetting our official with the handsome whiskers. Prosecution of these people must be inaugurated, whether there is a chance of convicting them or not, and the state and county must bear considerable expense, in order that Os. may show to the wondering world what a devil of a fellow he is.

But the Herald will express the opinion that when West attempts to put Crawford and nearly the entire population of Coos county out on a limb, he is barking up the wrong tree.

Bill Poulos, the Greek who tried high finance in the restaurant business on the Bay, and who has been in jail here for some time, was not indicted by the grand jury. Having returned the money to his countrymen whom he had tried to defraud they would not appear against him. There ought to be some way to prevent the use of the criminal law to force disgorgement in cases like this, only to let the criminal then go free.

In commenting on the Thaw case the Port Orford Tribune calls Thaw's act in killing Standford White "the one redeeming act that shines out of a checkered career," and adds: "Men by the score have been acquitted by the unwritten law of killings less justifiable than that of Standford White." The Tribune is right. White got only a part of what was coming to him, and while Thaw's character may be everything that is reprehensible, he did a good job that time. It is retribution of that kind were sure it would tend to stop the devilish work of such smooth scoundrels as Standford White.

So far the Herald has watched in vain among its exchanges for editorial comment on the action of the Oregon Power Company in voluntarily reducing its rates over quite a large section of the state. Had the change been to higher rates, the press would undoubtedly have had a lot to say, for the air of every editorial room is charged with ideas on the general cussedness of the grasping corporation. But when a public service corporation makes a break like that, it has a tendency to shock the editorial brain into a state of torpor, though those who are familiar with the principle upon which the C. M. Byllesby Co. do business need not be so hopelessly paralyzed.

Licenses to Wed

County Clerk Watson issued the following marriage licenses during the week:

George K. McIntosh and Clara M. Parks.

Isaac M. Nichol and Allie Hunter.

Room for Improvement

The occurrence of two bold, if small, burglaries in town lately has made some people wonder if it will be necessary to put on another night watchman. One gentleman who hunted the streets one night recently for an officer to take charge of a drunken husky who had invaded his premises, and who unsuccessfully extended his search as far as the city hall, expresses the opinion that there is room for improvement somewhere.

Death of Joe Nay

Joseph Nay, one of the oldest pioneers of Curry county, having settled near Port Orford in 1857, died Sunday morning at the home of his nephew, Marshal Nay, in Marshfield. He was 82 years of age and had been failing rapidly for the past six months and his death was not unexpected. Mr. Nay was well known by all the old settlers of Coos as well as Curry county, as he often visited this section, especially at fair and racing times. He was a noted lover of horses and usually had a string of racers. His love for the equine species, however, was not altogether of the utilitarian kind. He loved his horse as pets and companions and was a trainer of no mean ability. He was a liberal and wholesome man of the old school, a New Englander by birth, and was well liked by all.

Estimating Road Cost

The estimates given below were made by the county engineer of Douglas county as the cost of improving two miles of the Roseburg-Myrtle Point road two mile east from the Coos county line. The width of roadway in each instance is to be sixteen feet, and the concrete pavement is to be nine feet wide and six inches thick. If the road is planked the grade is to be sixteen feet wide and the planking nine feet wide and three inches thick, with ten turnouts per mile, each sixteen feet wide.

The first estimate is for the highest class material, the cement, sand and gravel to be hauled from Dilard a distance of 29 miles. For the entire work, grading and building the road complete, the estimate is:

For one mile $26,894.00

For two miles 53,788.00

The second estimate is for the use of local sand and gravel on part of the work and a less proportion of cement and is:

For one mile $21,061.36

For two miles 42,122.72

For the third estimate all local sand and gravel is to be used, and other changes in requirements:

For one mile $17,830.00

For two miles 35,660.00

For the planked road, with ten turnouts per mile, complete:

For one mile $6,958.73

For two miles 13,917.46

Narrow Escape

While a party of Marshfield people were enjoying themselves wading in the surf at Bandon last week, Mrs. Tom Hall had a narrow escape from being carried out to sea by an unusually large wave which rolled in without warning. The lady was carried off her feet, but fortunately a gentleman of the party was near enough to seize and hold her until the wave receded. In the meantime Tom himself who was seated well back on a drift log but saw that the water was going to reach him, at tempted to scramble over the log but was thrown back by a lady who was a better scrambler than he was and was clawing everything in reach and he landed on his back on the sand just as the wave got there. It is seldom that one of these extremely large waves comes along with the small ones, but when they do they are a source of great danger to the inexperienced. Several people have lost their lives on Coos county beaches in that way, and all visitors to the beach should keep a lookout when sporting themselves in the surf.

Myrtle Point Pointers

Mrs. Chas. Adams and Mrs. L. G. Johnson went to Bandon Friday to attend the "Natal Day" reunion of the Eastern Star.

Mrs. G. O. Lowe is receiving a visit from her mother, Mrs. Grossbeck, late of Riverside, Cal. and her nephew Mr. Cronan of Okla. They came in Thursday, via auto stage from Roseburg. The old lady, about 75, said she enjoyed most of the trip very much. She was so busy looking at the scenery that she did not find it at all rough riding. There is one that did not kick at the road anyway.

Albert Barklow's baby, a year old, who has been sick for some time, died on Thursday and was buried Wednesday.

On Wednesday Harvey Barklow's infant son was called home, and was buried on Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bryant had a son added to their family on the 1st.

East Fork Items

Steve Minard recently received a Jersey bull nine months old, from Brown, a breeder of Jerseys at Shedd's, Oregon, which cost him $171.42 landed at Coquille. Steve knows just how much milk and butter fat that line of Jerseys has been turning out and he is expecting future cows in his herd to do as well.

Chas. Heller commenced thrashing on the East Fork Monday 1st inst. The oat crop is turning out reasonably fair, four acres on Mr. Frederick's place gave 211 bushels.

Mrs. Clara Bunch sold her place to Mr. Fredericks and gave possession Sept. 1st.

Mr. Forester, Mrs. Forester and the Misses Forester of Bandon are visiting their relatives, the Courtwrights.

Mr. Heller says S. K. Hatcher of Fairview has the biggest crop per acre so far this fall, 437 bushels from 5 acres, about 4 acres oats, the balance wheat.

CURRY COUNTY CULLINGS

(From the Port Orford Tribune)

Fishing season for salmon opened on Rogue river yesterday and the fishermen are reported to be making good catches.

Isam Walker, the veteran stockman from Eureka who has driven more cattle and sheep out of Curry county than any other one man, was in the northern end of the county during the past week. Mr. Walker has been purchasing mutton sheep, a band of which he will drive south in the near future.

Rev. R. C. Young and wife, who have been located at Port Orford for the past two years, started for Portland by yesterday's stage. They will not return to this place as Mr. Young has been promised the charge of a church in the Willamette Valley. The young couple leave many friends in this place who will miss them. Another Methodist minister will be sent in the near future to take charge of this field.

Many of those who attended court at Gold Beach last week spent their leisure hours in trolling for salmon and some good catches were made.

Mr. Wann, the expert who is going over the county books, still has several weeks work ahead of him. He has found many tangles caused through incompetency, and he has also discovered enough errors, intentional or otherwise, in favor of the county to more than pay for the work he is doing.

(Gold Beach Globe)

In one haul at the mouth of the river last evening the seine caught between twenty-five hundred and three thousand salmon.

W. H. Williamson was joined by his family here Saturday, who come to spend the winter. It will be remembered that Mr. Williamson and associates built this black sand plant south of town two years ago. He now comes to re-open and operate the plant. He will however, make some changes by discarding some of the machinery and adding other kinds.

A. Auberry of Grants Pass returned Saturday to engage in the fall fishing for the Rogue River Salmon Packers. He came down the river in a skiff bringing with him a boat load of the world famous Rogue River Peaches, which sold on the local market for one dollar and fifty cents per box, almost as fast as they could be carried out of the boat. Mr. Auberry is about the only man on the river that has no fear of the treacherous rapids of the upper Rogue and has made many successful trips from Grants Pass to the sea.

Business Man on Advertising

Following is from a splendid paper on advertising which was read at a luncheon and meeting of the Commercial club at Atlantic, Ia., by F. M. Nebe, a prominent Atlantic shoe merchant:

I can remember the first ad. I ever wrote. It was for father. I said, "It seems to me as if we could do lots more business if we would advertise." He said: "Yes, I think so, too, but I can never write ads. If you want to, give the newspaper man a small one." He dictated; I wrote it: "Martin Nebe dealer in boots and shoes, South Side Square." We did more business; he thought that paid. So I began to write ads. that were different, ads. that would attract the people's attention, and there never was a year that our advertising did not pay.

We must divide advertising into two distinct classes—direct and cumulative. Direct advertising is advertising where you expect and usually get direct results if the ad. is well worded and properly displayed. Cumulative advertising is the kind of advertising that is built up day by day, week by week, month by month, year by year. Everlastingly keeping at it is what makes this kind of advertising pay, and many times you will hear from an ad. that you have probably forgotten about.

For all kinds of advertising—i. e., for all lines of business and at all times—the newspaper ranks first. There is no medium that reaches as many people and brings as good results for the money expended as do the newspapers. Only a few years ago there were many families who subscribed for no paper; today there is probably not a single family in the community that does not take several papers, and I think I would be safe in saying that every one takes a daily. I said that all kinds of advertising pays, but not all copy that is run in a newspaper pays—not because the newspaper is at fault, but because the copy is wrong and because the copy is sometimes never changed for months at a time. If the ad. says nothing and does not attract the reader's attention the money had as well be thrown in the gutter as far as results are concerned.

There are still a few merchants who say "It does not pay to advertise," but I am glad to say that they are rapidly disappearing from the ranks of the mercantile world.

I am sure that if it were possible to take these non-believers and have them take some of the ads. that they say did not pay them we would find that they got no results, not because advertising does not pay, but because the ad. had no story to tell and was in a sense not an ad. I am sure it would mean another recruit added to the thousands of merchants who have made a success of advertising.

One thing should be remembered when writing ads. and that is this—the day of sensational advertising is passing and the day of educational advertising is at hand. Truth is today a principal of efficiency in advertising. People no longer believe these great stories of goods having been shipwrecked or were in a railroad wreck or that the clothing stock just shipped into town had been miraculously saved from a great fire and was now going to be given to the dear public—i. e., almost given away. Today there must be a reason for doing what you say you are going to do.

Not long ago thirty-four of the best advertising experts in the United States met as a committee to talk over the advertising proposition as it is today and to see if they could not discover what change they could make in writing their ads. in order to get better results, having agreed that the time had come when there would have to be a different standard for advertising. It was decided that the thing to do was to write truthful advertising, advertising that would not be misleading, but that would have an interesting story to tell about the goods for sale. Already six of the leading states have passed laws against fraudulent advertising.
