CHANCE FOR A DEADLOCK

The Herald is in favor of good roads and is willing to give whatever support is in its power to the bonding proposition. Let no one, therefore, think from what is about to be said that it is "knocking" the good roads movement. But to the mammoth brain behind this type-writer it looks as though an irreconcilable deadlock were scheduled to show up right away in the bonding campaign. The announcement that Douglas county will not carry out the plan agreed on and build to the county line on the Middle fork, but will build down the Umpqua river to its mouth and there connect with a road from Coos Bay, will put an entirely different look on the whole proposition in this part of the county. It is evident that the new plan will suit Coos Bay as well as the old one, but it will not suit the river, and that fact will very soon become apparent. A route from the interior which comes in to Coos Bay through the heart of the Coquille country, and a route which reaches the Bay without touching Coquille territory, are two entirely different propositions. The first would receive the support of the people in this part of the county; the other will not. It is true that if Douglas will not build to the line on the Middle fork route it would be folly for this county to spend money on a hard surface road to that point. At the same time, it was on that very proposition of the Myrtle Point route that the people were willing to unite with the people of the Bay, and when that part of the plan is eliminated it will be found that the get-together spirit will not be so vigorously manifested on this side of the divide.

There is and has been for years a feeling on the Coquille that "Coos Bay wants to hog it all," and this feeling often finds expression in words. Whether or the feeling is justified by the record or not is beside the question at this time. It exists and must be reckoned with. There are hundreds of people in this part of the county who would rather put off the building of a system of good roads indefinitely than to help it through a project from which it would seem that Coos Bay would get the main benefit. It is no use to tell the people of the Myrtle Point territory that a connection with the interior by way of Coos Bay and the Umpqua will do them as much good as a direct route by way of the Middle fork. It is not true and everybody knows it. They may not blame the Coos Bay people for the determination of Douglas county to abandon the old plan—and then again they may. In any case, any change of plan, from whatever cause will arouse the greatest bitterness in that section and will meet with opposition that is liable to kill the whole project.

As a matter of fact, taking it for granted that the position now taken by Douglas county effectually kills the project of connection with the interior by way of the Middle fork and leaves us no choice as to the connection we may make with the outside, the scheme it still a good one. The county needs a system of good roads for her own use leaving out the consideration of tourist travel altogether. The trunk lines already planned for the system inside of the county should be built—must sooner or later be built, and the sooner the work is done the better for the people who are now here. But it is going to take a little "campaign of education" to show the people of this part of the county that they are not being flim-flamed.

Marshfield has learned from the Carnegie Library board that not more than $12,500 will be donated toward a library building in that town. This sum will be accepted, and eventually a building will arise there to commemorate the name of the man who is buying immortality by giving back part of the money which the people of this country have contributed to his coffers. Marshfield further bran's herself as a town that has her mit out for charity. No one can blame Carnegie if he thinks that the people of America are a lot of cheap and short sighted guys who are willing to be robbed in general if they are occasionally given a hand-out in particular.

The Bandon Surf makes a personal attack on one of Coquille's most respected citizens because he is alleged to have taken an interest in the Bandon "wet or dry" election—on the dry side. Had he cast his influence with the wets of course it would have been perfectly legitimate for him to butt in. It might be a good idea for the liquor interests and their organs to make up their minds that the Prohibitionists have as much right to their opinions as the rest of us. Further, they might find it profitable to realize in time that if they don't cut out some of the rough stuff they are going to be put out of business in this county.

The "Mexican situation" seems to be coming to a head with a tolerable degree of celerity, and it looks as though Huerta would have to "fish, cut bait or go ashore" very soon. Whether President Wilson and Secretary Bryan are handling the situation wisely or otherwise is a question about which most of the people know very little, so what's the use to butt in?

Harry K. Thaw has been ordered deported from New Hampshire for confinement in the Mattewan asylum from which he escape. The charge on which extradition is granted is conspiracy, in connection with his escape. Now we will see how long before he lands in his old quarters.

The Kinney Case

Now that election is over, the Kinney case again occupies the attention of the Coos Bay public to quite an extent, and last Friday's Record has this to say: Attorney E. R. Bryson said today that all interests in the Kinney matter are working harmoniously, including Major Kinney and representatives of all the principal lien holders and creditors and there is every prospect of a solution of the entanglement in a manner which will be to the interests of all concerned. The plans being arranged contemplate clearing all defects in the titles by suit and the placing of the properties on the market in the most advantageous manner.

The Herald is Thanked

The Herald is in receipt of the following night letter from President Campbell, of the State University: Eugene, Ore., 11-5-13 Editor Herald, Coquille, Ore. Your friendly attitude toward the University during the late struggle has been greatly appreciated. The University can now move forward immediately in its program in giving a far broader and more practical service to the people of the State. P. L. CAMPBELL.

Saves Child from Runaway

(Gold Beach Globe) Just as the last papers were being pulled off the press last Tuesday, the populace of the town was thrown into a fever heat of excitement for a few minutes, occasioned by a run-away team up Main street. The team belongs to Ash Moore and took freight by the Packing house, at a beef being loaded in to the wagon. Mary, the little four year old girl of D. M. Moore's was in the wagon at the time. The team ran up the hill to the county road and across the bridge headed through town towards the river. As they passed the Blacksmith shop Mr. Sobert, foreman of the Clarno place, who happened to be at the shop to get his horse shod, mounted his horse and ran along side of the wagon and getting hold of the lines brought the team to a halt in front of the hardware store. The child was rescued unhurt except a few slight bruises. Had it not been for the courage and expert horsemanship of Mr. Sobert, the child would have doubtless been killed and the team badly crippled if not killed, and the wagon demolished. As it was, Mr. Sobert barely escaped injury between the wagon and Moore's store porch.

Plans for University

University of Oregon Eugene, Nov. 10—A great state university for Oregon, with an immense student body, a high standard, as good a faculty as can be gotten together, and a system of dispensing knowledge that will reach the state at large, not merely the limited number on the campus, is the plan of President P. L. Campbell of the University of Oregon. It is a plan made possible by the favorable vote of November 4 upon the University's building appropriations. Already it has been started.

In a statement just before he left for Washington, D. C., to make an address before the National Association of State Universities, President Campbell gave an inkling of his plans. Here are some excerpts from his statements: "The reward of all these citizens should be found in a strengthened and broadened system of higher education in Oregon which will rapidly advance the state to a position educationally second to none in the Union.

"The University can confidently bid for the best men the country produces as members of its faculty. Oregon has recently been unusually fortunate in securing men of the very finest type, but such good luck cannot be counted on steadily unless there are reasonable expectations of permanent University growth.

"With the University now free from the harassing distractions of campaigns and allowed to concentrate all its energies, with hope and renewed courage, on its problems of higher efficiency and broadened service, it can very soon become a principal factor in the state's development.

"The whole system of higher education in Oregon is now in a position to make remarkable advances."

Prosperous Curry

A gentleman who just returned from a trip to Port Orford and vicinity reports that the road for about twelve miles south of Bandon is in a distressing condition for travel at this time. However, much good work has been done in the last few years in the way of straightening and improving the grades. This visitor was much struck with the evidences of growth and prosperity in Curry county, as shown by the changes since his last several visits years ago. He saw many new farms opened up, new farm residences and large barns, and everything indicating substantial development of the county.

Working Up the Cedar

(Port Orford Tribune) An important sale was made recently when E. J. Loney purchased all of L. Knapp's timber, in the vicinity of the cemetery. The sale involved a consideration of $5000, and the timber that changed hands is estimated at about 4,500,000 feet a good percentage of which is white cedar. Mr. Loney now has seven men on the land cutting railroad tie and expects to add about three more to this number for the winter, and when summer opens he will run a crew of twenty or more cutters. It is his intention to utilize all of the timber. The fir and green cedar will be hauled to the mill in town, several men now being engaged in cutting logs that M. T. Wright is delivering at the mill. The dead cedar that is suitable will be cut into railroad ties, and that that is not suitable for ties will be made into telephone poles, match-wood, etc. In addition to this work Mr. Loney has several men cutting in the woods between Elk and Sixes. With this industry and the mining development on Sixes, the outlook for winter work in this section is unusually good.

Manager Green Goes

D. C. Green, manager of the Oregon Power Company in Coos, has been promoted by the H. M. Bylles, by Co., and will go to Everett, Wash., to take charge of that district. While this is a gain for Everett, and undoubtedly for Mr. Green, it is a distinct loss for Coos, and his departure will be greatly regretted here. He will be succeeded by R. M. Jennings, who was formerly in charge at Marshfield and who has been at Eugene for the past two years. The change is expected to take place about the middle of this month.

NOTES ON THE PHOTOPLAYS

Of Interest to Those Who Patronize the Movies

Coquille has seen some great pictures within the last few days. The Pendleton Round-Up, shown at the Scenic Saturday night was the best Round-Up picture, so far, and it filled the house.

Last night, Sarah Bernhardt in "La Tosca" gave us a chance to see the great Frenchwoman in the performance which she calls her masterpiece. Those who had seen her "Queen Elizabeth" picture pronounce "La Tosca" far the better. It shows the divine Sarah to much better advantage. As a cold matter of fact, the main interest of the picture centers in the sight of Bernhardt in action. It is impossible in two reels to give any adequate conception of Sardou's tragedy, as the picture can only touch the high places, and one must be familiar with the story to get the full benefit of the picture. However, as showing the greatest actress of the age and the most wonderfully youthful old woman in the world it is well worth while. The only fault that could be found with the presentation last evening was that the operator ran the first reel so insensitively fast that he completely spoiled the effect. This is a fault that is entirely too common.

The Vitagraph feature shown last evening, in which a real live tiger played one of the leading roles was a thrilling and surprising showing of extraordinary training of one of the fiercest, most treacherous and least tameable animals. It took several months for Julia Swayze Gordon to make friends with "Prince" at the Vitagraph studio, and none of the other Vitagraph actresses were pulling for the job of under-study.

It is said that the first public exhibition of moving pictures was at Koster & Bial's Thirty-fourth Street Theater, New York City, on April 23, 1896. The machine was an Edison Vitascope, and the films were forty feet long.

James J. Corbett and Mrs. Fiske have broken into moving pictures, the latter appearing in a version of "Tess of the D'Urbervilles."

Farmers' Week Courses

The Farmers' Week course at the Oregon Agricultural College begins on Monday, December 8th, 1913, and the Short Course will extend from January 5th to 30th, 1914. As indicated by the ad in this issue, the College has endeavored to make these events of first importance directly to the farmer and indirectly to every other citizen in Oregon. The cost to the State will be considerable, but will be insignificant in proportion to the results if a large attendance is secured.

Solved! The perplexing question had arisen many times during their brief matrimonial experience, and again Mrs. Flint asked her young husband if he thought they could get along without the cook. "I think so, dear," he answered. "Why, if the worst comes you can do the cooking, and I can get my meals at a restaurant."—Denver Republican
