Telephones Makes Guys Awful Fresh —The Conductor

"I'm sore on telephones. "If any guy'd come to your front door an' holler in your face, 'Hello, what's your name?' that fellow'd hit th' sidewalk so quick he'd think you was the White Hope. "We got a telephone in our house, I and Lizzie have. It's 418 Party W. You see they's somebody else on the same wire, but you can't hear what they say, 'cept sometimes. "Th' other mornin' about daylight, jus' when I'd got over havin' a night horse, an' was sleepin' to beat th' band, that fool telephone rang like a trolley gong. I jumps out o' bed like a fireman an' got my foot in th' wrong leg o' my pants tryin' to get 'em on. Lizzie keeps hollerin' at me, 'Go an' answer it. Don't keep 'em waitin'.' An' I says, 'Now, woman, don't aggravate me; I'm hurrin' fast 's can. I'm not gonna run aroun' th' house bare-legged jus' 'cause that darned telephone makes a noise like a 'larm clock struck by lightning'."

"But I got to it on th' jump, an' says I: 'Hello, hello, hello, what's th' matter?' An' some guy on th' other end of th' 'phone hollers: "Who is that talkin'?' An' I says: "Who are you, you big crazy horse, callin' people up 4 o'clock in th' mornin' askin' 'em who they be? "Say, says he, 'them calves' brains o' yours is th' limit.' "En' I shot back at him, 'My brains ain't much good, but if you'll put your pants on an' come over here I'll make you eat a pair o' knuckles that's goin' on 40 years old, you fresh nut, you! What d' y' mean callin' up honest people out o' bed this time o' night? "Aw, ring off, ring off,' he hollers. 'I want th' butcher. What's your number? Ring off, ring off!' "An' jus' then I hear a nice young girl break in, saying to me: "What number did you want? "Can you beat it? They's no use tryin' to be a gent with one o' them things in th' house. Its a good thing th' Bible was writ an' all them goody goody guys lived long 'fore they had any telephones. Nobody ever told them fellows to 'ring off' without gettin' somethin handed to 'em. "I'm sore on telephones "Be careful gettin' on there! "Don't block them people's way. Let 'em on! "Watch your step!"

Because. There are many splendid things men can't do because they never try.—Chicago Record-Herald

The Tramp Town

(Gold Hill News) Hard Looks is the copartner and fellow-bum of that whining mendicant, Hard Times. Together they go down the dusty pike, appropriate companions—just travel in'. The frowsy chap who beats the local freight may be a blase millionaire in disguise—but the community terms him a bum, and is generally correct. Appearances are dead against him, anyway—and there is a handicap that few out-run. It's the same way with towns. You may congregate a galaxy of business talent and good fellows in a single community, but the unpainted buildings, the dilapidated walks, the vacant lot jungle, will largely offset their well intended efforts to create a live town in a vicinity that suggests the morgue. Towns go on the bum, just like folks. When a dog-fite creates more genuine enjoyment than a musical concert, when the corner pavement is polished by the application of loafing trousers, and the arrival of a way-freight is an event—that town is going to seed. It is a safe wager that you need not walk a block to discover a broken window pane, stuffed with a pillow. The homeseeker will go round it as a swamp, the investor will reach for his timetable, the country trade will flow past or around. Step—there is yet another sign board along the way that leads from civic pride to the tramp town. It is the well-thumbed catalog of the mail order house: It convicts every citizen and every business-man of inertia in his own interests.
