Catarrh Cannot Be Cured

Candidate for Hero Medal Saves Man From the River

(According to late advices the story given below as it first came to us is wrong in several particulars, but it is such a good story as it stands that we hate to change it. Archie Tennison was also with the auto party; Parker did not dive in but went in with the blanket as a lifeline, and a rope was procured from a farmhouse with which to haul the two men out.)

Four men bad an exciting time all to themselves Saturday night, while a rescuer and rescuee struggled in the waters of the river and two danced up and down on the bank. Jack Parker, of Marshfield, round trip in one day. Jesse Hite pleasantly. The club will have a played the hero part, and this is no been awarded for acts less unselfishly heroic, The story comes to the Herald like this: Parker took passage with Earl Shroeder for Myrtle Point about 9:30. At the Collier that the house will probably be indications seem to be that Gage place about a mile above town, they were hailed by a man who came running across the field and who implored them to come and help, as his partner had fallen into the river and neither could swim. They left the car and ran across the field to the bank of the river. The bank was high and steep and the night was dark, and the man in the water could not be seen. Parker was told, "He is down there somewhere." He threw off his coat and dived into the darkness. He made a good Governor: Brownell 22, Carter 29, shot, passing under the man, who Attorney General: Brown 181, out, but had become confused as to Farrin 8, Grant 23, Johnson 4, directions and started the wrong way. The men on the bank lit matches to give him his bearings, and after a hard struggle and when on the point of exhaustion he brought his quarry to the shore The strangers had been camping on the bank of the river, and their Clerk: Allen 112, Kruse 16, Wat-blankets were lowered as a life line to the two in the water so that Parker was able to struggle up the bank with his exhausted companion. The latter had been in the water a long time and was all
