LEGAL ETHICS

in Bunker Hill, Skerrett's attorneys community. gave out through the Record a story of evidence which they claimed to have had at their disposal from the first to the effect that the fire orignamed Skugg during his temporary by a cigarette which he had been smoking. Naturally, the Times, having been scooped, tried to refute the story. But the point that should be brought out for the attention of the taxpavers is the code of ethics which actuated the attorneys in holding back this evidenceit will be remembered no evidence for the defense was put in at the examination. Supposing the Skugg story to be true, it would appear that Skerrett could have been clearly proved innocent at the preliminary it all seemed to him. He spoke examination. Yet it seems as though his attorneys were willing that he should be bound over and should rest under the cloud until the next meeting of the circuit court, when they would come in on the trial and give him a triumphant vindication. In the meantime the taxpayers of this county would be footing the bills for all the expenses-and, presumably, Skerrett would have paid his lawyers a good fat fee for clearing him from the serious charge. Comment doesn't seem to be necessary.
