Oration at Cottonwood Crossing

(Ben H. Lampman, Gold Hill News)
Friends, fellow patriots and neighbors all—the murmur of yon stream is Freedom's call. Upon this here occasion we are met, in memory of a day that none forget. The murmur of yon stream is Freedom's call. It whispers, as it hurries through the loam, of the good brotherhood that binds us all. It speaks of home.

You've draped a flag among the titan oaks. What does it mean to each of us, good folks? That flag that waves o'er stream and forge and corn? This here's the day that there old flag was born. What does it mean to each of us, good folks, who know it over school and country store? We never left our oxen in the yokes—to meet no more.

Look—how the sweet breeze blows it back a fold! Yonder's a vision of the times of old! Behind it, on the meadow, stands revealed the litten memory of a glorious field. Yonder's a vision of the times of old. Beyond all latter day inconsequentials, stand ragged men who laugh at war and cold—the Continentals!

Friends, they are real; as real as you and I. I tell you that the craven only die! This here's the flag that valor brought to birth. This picnic ground, they made it freedom's earth. I tell you that the craven only die. Dear God, we thank Thee that Thou cast these few—and gave us something to remember by. Friends—I am through

"A Sane Fourth"

The Fourth passed off very quietly in Coquille, the only life being furnished by the swarming automobiles in which people were hurrying to the races at Myrtle Point and the celebration at Marshfield. The patriotic enthusiasm of our citizens was visually demonstrated by the rustling folds of a five-cent flag hung from the Herald office. There would have been two of them, but some fellow got away with one last Fourth before we could get them in again. On Second street Mrs. Wickham and the Bazaar had several flags adorning the front of their places. It is reported that the court house also had a flag out.

On B Street a firecracker thrown from Machon's billiard hall exploded in the street, and Mr. Machon later contributed two plunks to the city treasury for the heinous offense. On Sunday afternoon the lid was raised long enough by the Marshall to let Folsom unload his supply of firecrackers and these were set off in the street, one at a time, relieving the monotony for awhile.

On Sunday quite a number went on an excursion to Bandon beach, and many others went in various directions in their automobiles. Taken as a whole, the advocates of a sane Fourth must have been pleased with the day at Coquille.

Leader Changes Name

The following announcement of purpose appears at the head of the editorial column of the Coos-Curry Rostrum, successor to the Curry County Leader, published at Langlois Oregon:

The purpose of establishing this paper is to place in the field a medium that can be used by the people in their behalf, to protect themselves from the cliques and organizations, whose role has become absolute; also after getting a general idea from the people to agitate for conditions that will benefit the people of Coos and Curry Counties also against any one or condition that is a detriment to the masses. The time is here when the people are compelled to act; and to act ignorantly would be disastrous. We have installed a large X-ray in our plant, and the one's who come before it and can not stand the examination must suffer; also all conditions that are incurable with cooperation must be dissolved. Our X-ray has already been put to work, and revealed the fact that cliques and organizations are in existence in Coos Bay who are a detriment to the people's welfare, we will print the truth of these conditions just as soon as our circulation list permits us to. So if the people of Coos and Curry Counties want to know, "who is who" in this district also the methods used, their tools, power, and etc, also if the people want to know what the future has in store for them and their possibilities, for advancement if they want to keep a medium in the field that will be used to expose these tyrants who hold forth in Marshfield, North Bend, Coquille, and Bandon by the Sea. To do this work we need the assistance of the people, our policy is to fight with the truth to get justice for the one's who toil.

When we reflect that the Leader was founded for the promotion of the rankest piece of wildcat real estate faking ever pulled off in Oregon it is gratifying to see that it has reformed and is now willing to play the part of moral censor for the rest of us.

Lights Out

For the first time in many moons the Oregon Power Co. had a breakdown last Friday that put its patrons to considerable inconvenience. A slide valve on the engine broke early in the forenoon and after having it patched at a local machine shop it was found not to be in a condition for safety. Then Manager McKenna got busy with the phone and found that the Dollar Co. had a similar engine at Bandon, from which he could borrow the valve. Then he chased down there with an automobile, returning in time to get the lights on again at 9:30. The greatest sufferer here was the picture show, but McKenna has promised to come to the show and bring his family until he makes up the loss.

NOTES ON THE PHOTOPLAYS

Of Interest to Those Who Patronize the Movies

The spectacle of "America," shown in pictures at the Grand last night must have been a grand affair when produced in the New York Hippodrome. When it came to making a picture of it, full justice could not be done to the production. The impossibility of lighting the immense stage brightly enough to make clear pictures, and the necessity of covering so large a space by setting the camera at a distance caused some of the scenes to appear dark and the figures in others too small. Nevertheless, the picture was well worth seeing and gave a good idea of the spectacle.

The Grand has made arrangements to secure the services of the Paramount feature pictures, which is undoubtedly the best regular feature service on the market today. They are so good and in such demand that it is necessary to wind considerable red tape to get them, and it is impossible to say just when the first one will be shown. But watch for further announcements, for you will not want to miss these splendid, high-class productions.

DIED

UPDYKE—In this city, July 5, 1915, Chas. Updyke, aged about 50 years.

The deceased had been living in the northern part of town and working at different jobs, and was considered somewhat unsound mentally. He had been fasting for fourteen days, taking neither food nor water, in an endeavor to improve defective hearing. It seems that he had fasted for about forty days on a previous occasion, but that time he took water, while this time he took neither food nor water, the result being fatal. He leaves a family back East, and a telegram from a son to Undertaker Ellingson this morning directed that the remains be buried here and that no expense could be borne by the family. The funeral will take place tomorrow.

Hawaiian Musicians Coming to the Grand

The Grand has secured for Tuesday evening of next week one of the best attractions that ever visited this city, the Hawaiian Concert Company. Every one who has ever heard Hawaiian music is enthusiastic in praise of its sweetness and fascinating melody. There are seven performers in the company, and the entertainment given is of two hours duration. Admission prices will be 50 cents for adults, 25 cents for children under 12 years accompanied by parents or guardians.

From many favorable press notices, the following from a Telluride, Colo., paper is selected:

Friday night at the Segerberg Peterson & Vierra's Hawaiian Concert company put on the play "The Flower of Love," and from that drifted into one of the finest musical performances Telluride has ever been given a chance to listen to. There were eight people in the troupe—six men and two women, and they sing and play beautifully. It has been said that "Music hath charms to soothe the savage breast" and it a savage was there last night and was not soothed, if some one will turn him over to the marshal he will put on the finishing touches. Except one or two numbers of instrumental pieces, all were played on string instruments, and the music was so soft and sweet and so satisfying in composition that encore followed encore and responses were so generously given that the troupe made a most excellent impression. Miss DeFoliant put on her unique version of Uncle Tom's Cabin in song. When she got thru nailing little Eva to the moon and skidding the dogs over the wooden ice, every one was convulsed with laughter. The show is about the best in its line we have had in Telluride, and the press gang need not be afraid to say that they are in a class by themselves.

Auto Accidents

Friday morning Charlie Ashtons' car was considerably damaged on account of a wheel giving way beneath it on a sharp turn in the road about two miles below this place. Mr. Ashton was coming up from Bandon with his family. He was going at a rather high rate of speed and as he made a sharp turn one of the wheels smashed, causing the machine to turn completely over and roll down a rather steep bank. No one was injured.

Lem Lambeth driving his big Cadillac car smashed into a Baud car on the Marshfield road Monday night. The Bandon car was damaged considerably but no one was injured.

Doc Barker went to sleep while driving on the Bandon road Saturday night. He smashed into the railing on a bridge which woke him up to the fact that he had had a narrow escape, and served to keep him awake the rest of the journey.

Last Friday Paul Ford, stage driver on the Coquille-Bandon line had a collision on the Bandon road a few miles below town which smashed the radiator of his Ford to such an extent that it could not be repaired. He purchased another at the bay but the accident kept him off his run for nearly a day. No one was injured.

PROF. SAP SPRADLEN

It is with very deep pleasure that we write to our readers about Prof. Sap Spradlen, the Wild Onion school teacher. Last summer, before departing for the teachers' institute at Tickville, he ate a lot of grape nuts and other brain food, and then reached his hair straight up, so that prominence would be given his forehead when the teachers had their pictures made in a group. He had himself placed on the program at institute, and delivered a talk on "The Effect the Brain Has on the Mind." His argument was that if a person hasn't any brains he is a fool. His talk which extended over an hour, received much stumping when he finished and sat down with a great deal of satisfaction over himself. For several seasons Prof. Spradlen has by his shrewd political manipulations, got himself elected unanimously as teacher of the Wild Onion school. He renders great assistance in the cause of education and besides was instrumental in having the school house turned around so that the map would hang north and south. Prof. Spradlen is a firm believer, of late years, in the theory that the world is round and teaches it daily to his pupils. While Mr. Spradlen is not a candidate for any office at the present time, he desires to get his uncle elected trustee again so that he can continue to hold the job at Wild Onion.
