BELGIAN CHILDREN MEET PARENTS IN AMERICA.

Photo by American Press Association. Belgian refugees came to America since the war started and settled in the northwest. A priest was later sent to Europe to round up their children, who have now been sent to their parents.

ond class degree have been holding their convention in Washington. Someone asked the officials who had been appointed under the present administration to stand up, and they arose by the hundreds. And then those who had "held over" were asked to stand, and a lonely thirteen responded. It developed that most of them were hushing out their terms and they know that "the goblins will get them even if they do watch out."

Holland and Herrings.

To the sea the Dutch owe most of their wealth. The art of curing herring was discovered by a poor Dutch fisherman, William Beukels, in 1350, who found that the fish which they caught in great abundance could be smoked and salted away in kegs and then transported to the ends of the world in good condition. Such a trade resulted that it was said that "Amsterdam is built on herring bones." Several hundred years after the death of Beukels the emperor, Charles V., went to the tomb of the fisherman and there ate a herring in gratitude for the invention. And in a church in Berrelet today may be seen a stained glass window in honor of this man. Herring have been one of the chief means of trade to the Hollanders, so that even at the present day the first catch is taken to the royal palace in a coach and six.

The fact that the two dominant political parties of Holland for hundreds of years were called the "Cods" and the "Fishhooks" shows that maritime matters were the uppermost in the people's thoughts.—Exchange.

Concerning the Dolomites.

The fairland about Cortina is familiar to thousands of tourists as "The Dolomites." Dolomite, a rock compounded of carbonate of lime and carbonate of magnesite, takes its name from the French geologist Deodat de Grate, Marquis de Dolomite, who spent his time in 1789 and the following years, while his countrymen were busy with revolution and war, in visiting this and other Alpine districts. He first mentions this kind of rock in 1791, and the word "Dolomite" first occurs in a pamphlet of 1802 describing a tour of his in the Alps about the St. Gothard and the Simplon. The curious point, noted by Mr. Coolidge, is that the marquis seems to have paid no attention to the dolomite rocks in the neighborhood of his own home, Dolomite, near Grenoble.—London Mirror.

MASONRY'S GREATEST TEMPLE

"Freemasonry carved in stone" is the fitting description applied to the new Scottish Rite Temple, dedicated in Washington a few days ago. The structure cost a million and a quarter dollars and it is the permanent home of the Thirty-third Degree Masons of the Southern Jurisdiction of the Scottish Rite. The approach is by three, five, seven and nine steps, and they lead one between two mammoth sphinxes carved in stone. Masons and their families were admitted on the opening night, and they agreed that the structure was one of the finest in the world. There are many rooms, but the "lodge room" is the most splendid. There are found the three stations familiar to Masonry. In the center of the room is the most wonderful altar ever placed in a lodge room. It is not only beautiful, but massive and impressive. This room is located under the dome of the building. The whole overhead has the effect of the "blue canopy of heaven," and a flood of concealed lights produce an effect so that one imagines the stars within actually shine and twinkle. It is all there except Jacob's ladder, perhaps that too, may be in place when "lodge meets." Perhaps no modern building in existence more fittingly symbolizes the old truths which have come down through the ages, and the Masons assert that they have "cemented here into one noble block destined to withstand the storms of time and be a beacon light, through which its ancient prototype will continue to project rays of Charity, Toleration and Loving Kindness over the whole world."

A NIGHT IN HIGH-BROWLAND

In the case of "Androcles and the Lion" and the Belasco Theatre, we have a theatrical matter of national concern. In the first place the Belasco is Washington's greatest playhouse, and there is no institution more typically national. It is situated across from LaFayette Park, which neutrally shelters great statues of the French General, as well as the German Von Steuben and patriots of other nations now engaged in the death grapple. The President, from the front windows of the "White House, looks across the unobstructed way upon the Belasco, and his first appearance in a theatre with his fiancée, Mrs. Galt, was to see "Androcles and the Lion." Neither Androcles nor the lion would have had any importance had it not been for George Bernard Shaw, who wrote the play. When an author or a playwright is a lad, the answer is: Investigate, there must be something to it. Caruso won every scoffing American whose curiosity took him to the Opera; but Shaw will hardly do that much. He will, however, convince clever-minded persons who have the power to think in spheres deeper than a sauce pan, that he is the "real thing" in literature, art and play-writing. Shaw is so intelligently funny that people who read and think lose all prejudices on first acquaintance. It is a hard thing to "write differently", since every one is failing trying; but Elbert Hubbard did it, and though his body perished on the Lusitania, his memory and his writings will remain fresh in the hearts and minds of his admirers. Shaw, it is said, writes for the "High-brows" and he should plead guilty to the charge, but "high-browland" loses its terrors after a night at the Belasco. You behold Shaw from a different viewpoint, and you become convinced that he symbolizes brains, and it is a source of satisfaction to discover that you have enough of the latter to be able to enjoy his works. You could appreciate him again if you had to attend in denim jumpers. You know, too, that it takes more than fine and flossy clothes to get the same results, and you cannot help but pity the "Chol-monopoly on potash for a very long time, and the war has brought home to the United States a realization of its dependence on a foreign country. Secretary Lane announces the finding of a mineral in Utah that yields potash in commercial quantities, and he regards it as one of the most important matters connected with our mineral resources. Americans are also hopeful that they have solved the problem of producing dye stuffs at home.

ACROSS THE RIO GRANDE

Mexico is once more a real Government, and in place of the finger of scorn, the hand of friendship has been extended towards Carranza and his faction. The Americans are now all in line, and if Villa and his bands would only follow suit the Monroe doctrine, A. B. C. and B. U. G. diplomacy would be vindicated. The person or persons who are constantly reporting the death of Villa appear to be over optimistic.

ly boys" who have twiddled their gloves and yawned through great plays like those produced by Bernard Shaw.

BITTER STRUGGLE PREDICTED

The determination of President Wilson and his advisers to insist on immense appropriations for increasing the army and navy is sure to stir up a big fight in Congress. The results of the rampant insurgency of Colonel Bryan is not minimized by leaders in the Democratic party. With the patronage practically all gone, the Administration faces a fight within the party, and is lacking in the weapons that oftentimes whip recalcitrants into line. The movement for "national defense" is splendidly organized, and has the support of the great business interests that are making gigantic fortunes out of the shooting of soldiers in Europe. The person who dares to stand up and talk in favor of moderation, runs the risk of being assailed for lacking in patriotism and love of country. What few so-called "Peace Societies" there are in existence, do not appear to grapple with the problem, and if they are making any attempt in the direction of checking militarism, their efforts are apparently proving ineffectual because of misapprehension or misdirected energy.

GREAT MEN AND THEIR WIVES.

If it is true that President Wilson and his future wife hold different views upon the subject of suffrage, the incident is not without precedent, as there was a good deal of talk in Washington two or three years ago to the effect that Champ Clark was an anti, while his wife and daughter were for "Votes for Women." The genial Speaker capitulated, just as did Mr. Wilson when it came to a "show down." The Republican leader, James R. Mann, was another to get into line for equal suffrage. In view of the returns from New Jersey it is not unlikely that some of these eminent statesmen may conclude that they made a mistake in which way the wind was blowing.

"SHADOW LAWN."

It is a long road from the quiet cottage in which lived Professor Wilson and his family to the great structure that will be the "Summer White House." President Wilson and his bride will be surrounded by every splendor in their new home, and the garage is more magnificent than the simple little place from which Woodrow Wilson went out cross country to play golf and act as his own caddie, because as he relates, he didn't have money enough to pay a boy to do it for him. The postmasters of first and sec-

Fine Cast of "The Idler"

Seldom, if indeed ever, has a more competent or better known cast been gathered together than that selected to present the William Fox feature extraordinary, "The Idler," to be released through the Box Office Attraction Company, based on the highly successful and dramatic play by C. Haddon Chambers, one of England's foremost dramatists, which, when presented on the boards, was one of the most talked-of dramas of the day. Headed by Charles Richman, a star whose fame is equally great on each side of the Atlantic, it includes Miss Catherine Courtis, an actress of unusual charm and ability; Walter Hitchcock, a finished artist of marked power; Miss Claire Whitney, a beautiful and accomplished leading woman, Maud Turner Gordon, W. T. Carleton and Stuart Holmes, all of whose names are prime favorites with admirers of good stage work.

Mr. Richman as Mark Cross takes full advantage of his opportunity to develop this character, which is one of the strongest in which he has appeared. Mr. Richman's long association with Augustin Daly, at the latter's famous play-house where Mr. Richman played opposite to Ada Rehan, and his many starring experiences, including a tour in "The Revellers," a successful play written by himself, equip him admirably for the role. The same may be said of Miss Courtis, who plays Lady Harding. Miss Courtis is known to playgoers of every considerable city in the United States. She has had a successful stage career almost from the moment when she left a convent and took up the stage as a vocation. Miss Whitney appeared in the leading role of "Life's Shop Window," and has played important parts in scores of big feature photo-plays before which she had a thorough training on the legitimate stage. Walter Hitchcock is another actor whose experience and talent make his work stand out in everything he does. Mr. Hitchcock is a graduate of Leland Stanford University and was a champion hurdle racer in his college days. He has done much noteworthy work on the stage. Stuart Holmes played a leading part, opposite to Miss Whitney, in "Life's Shop Window," and is a great favorite, a position his ability fully entitles him to.

HARBOR POLICE PREPARE FOR WAR.
