The heavy wind Wednesday night blew the awning off the First National Bank and off Mrs. Burkholder's store. It also blew down several small signs, and tipped the big smokestack over on Kime & Von-Pegert's garage. It wasn't what could be called a hurricane, but it was some wind storm at that.

The Turkey Shoot.

The turkey and chicken shoot given by O. F. Smith last Tuesday was a huge success. The local gunmen were at the traps from 9 in the morning until dark. One man shot away $16 to win one duck and a chicken. Another paid $12.50 for one turkey. Rather expensive meat. Others were more fortunate, one man winning two turkeys for $2.85, while some got chickens at 10 cents apiece.

Dead Out of Season

A large forked horn buck was found dead in the road near the Fish Trap country yesterday. It had a large charge of bird shot in its side and had evidently been potted by some duck hunter and had run some distance before falling. It was still warm when discovered and likely had only been dead a few minutes. As it is out of season probably no one wants to claim the honor of killing it.

The Walking Was Bad

L. H. Hazard and Dr. C. W. Endicott returned last Friday from the Frisco fair. They intended arriving home by Thanksgiving day, but while they were on the other side of the mountains on the Coos Bay road a high wind came up that blew about half the trees on the mountains down, and across the road and they had to hoof it to Jim Laird's through the storm, a distance of about 12 miles. That part of the trip was not enjoyed.

The Donation Industry.

Not to be entirely outdone by our neighbors who have been receiving a startling number of donations, as was mentioned in last week's issue, the editor's family found quite a large assortment of choice vegetables not very long ago which were traced back to Johnson's mill; and a few mornings ago a fine pumpkin appeared on the back porch—but we are forbidden to mention the name of the suspected donor in this case. However, his back, as he hurried stealthily up the hill, reminded us somewhat of our East Fork correspondent.

Old Writing Machine.

An old Caligraph, representing the first crude attempt at making a writing machine, has been placed in the museum of the O. A. C. School of Commerce by Graham & Wells, of Corvallis. There is scarcely a trace of resemblance between the old machine and the modern Caligraph. Some of the parts are of wood, rendering them light for their size. The ribbon is one inch wide, and the writing completely invisible. The keyboard is of the double system type. The machine still does pretty good work for its extreme age, although not up to standard on speed.

Commercial Print Issued.

The first issue of the Commercial Print, the official organ of the School of Commerce at O. A. C., has appeared, and contains a great deal of information valuable to students, their home folk, and to those engaged in business and office work everywhere. One of the helpful things contained is a complete directory, giving the names, home addresses, courses, years, and college addresses of all students of the institution. A faculty directory is also included. The volume sells at 25 cents a copy and can be had by writing for it and enclosing amount.

Has Hard Fall

His left shoulder suffered a severe strain and he was considerably bruised. It was very fortunate that no bones were broken. Dr. G. Earl Low patched him up and he is recovering nicely.

Farewell Smoker

The Ko Keel club gave a smoker Friday evening in honor of P. M. Hall-Lewis, who departed Saturday for California. There were about twenty-five present and an enjoyable time was had by all present. The famous game "Hickey" took up most of the evening. Light refreshments were served at a late hour, after which the party broke up, after all present wishing the guest the best of luck on his trip south.

East Fork Items

When J. D. Laird met the warm wind near the township line between ranges 10 and 11 the day before Thanksgiving, he said, "six years ago I was down this way and there was a warm wind just like this and we had a flood right after it." The flood came this time, too, for Thanksgiving day. The water was the highest that it has been for three years; it came up quick, although it lacked a lot of being as high as in former years. A large amount of drift went down the East Fork.
