A little flurry was caused last week by the appearance on the front page of the Oregonian of an "announcement" by Chief Engineer Hoy that the Southern Pacific would build from Coos Bay to Eureka, closing the existing gap and completing the "coast road" from Portland to San Francisco.

Random Rambles

(By a Rambler.) Being somewhat of a rambler I thought your readers might be interested to know how the country round impresses an outsider. Recently I made a trip to the Fairview and McKinley district and as my business takes me among the farmers I will give some of the things that appealed to me most strongly.

the part of its citizens to "pay-as-you-go." This section is already famous but we predict it will be more widely known in the next few years for it has a great natural outlet. It is tributary to Coquille and the bulk of the business comes to this place.

If this article escapes the waste basket, (we know the editor has a big one), we may venture to try again later. In most of the homes we visited we found the county papers represented. The Herald is a regular and welcome visitor to many of them.

"Dr. Rameau"

In "Dr. Rameau," which unfolds one of the most powerful stories ever presented upon the screen, Frederick Perry, who achieved such an impressive personal triumph in the Broadway success, "On Trial," is afforded a vehicle that will unquestionably add new laurels to his fame.

The story, by George Ohnet, the eminent modern French author, is one of the most dramatic and powerful produced by William Fox. It is replete with big moments; there is no let up in the action, and in the particularly strong scenes leading up to the climax of the story the suspense is actually painful.

Pierre Rameau, the son of a railway gate-keeper, witnesses a disastrous explosion in a nearby quarry. Although there are many people on the ground, the lad is the only one with enough presence of mind to summon medical aid, and when the physician arrives, is the only person cool headed enough to render him assistance.

Reading in the same house is a young German artist, named Munnell, a dreamer and a mystic. Dr. Rameau saves the young man's life by a very delicate operation, and a strong friendship springs up between them.

Dr. Rameau's friend, Dr. Talvanne, who is an alienist and phrenologist, warns him that Munnell is not trustworthy, morally, as is shown by the formation of his head. Rameau, however, disregards this advice, and a strange triple alliance is formed between these three men, all so totally different.

Some time after, Dr. Rameau is called upon to attend the deathbed of a Madam Etchevary. Although he is unable to save her life, he gains the love of her daughter, Conchita. At the age of 50 he marries her, although she is a girl of twenty.

Munnell secretly admires Conchita, and she returns his affection, although neither speaks of their love. As time goes on a gulf widens between Conchita and her husband. Rameau, however, blindly trusts his wife and best friend, and is indignant when Talvanne suggests that she be followed.

Talvanne suspects the existence of a mutual tie between Conchita and the handsome young artist. Conchita consents to pose for Munnell. One day Talvanne visits Munnell's studio to find out how he is progressing on Conchita's portrait. Stealing unawares upon the lovers, he surprises them in an embrace. He insists that the liaison be broken up immediately, without arousing the doctor's suspicion.

Rameau is grieved at the loss of his friend, but is comforted when, a few months later, Conchita's little daughter is born. Little Pamela, as she is called, possesses, to Dr. Rameau's delight, the frank blue eyes and golden hair which he always admired in his friend.

In leaving the country Munnell leaps from his carriage in order to escape an oncoming train and is mortally hurt. Rameau, deeply shocked, informs Conchita of this, but refuses her entreaties to be brought to his bedside. Conchita, broken-hearted, fades day by day after Munnell's death, and in spite of all the loving skill of Dr. Rameau, she dies.

As years pass by, the wound in Dr. Rameau's heart seems to heal, but on each anniversary of Conchita's death he passes long hours alone in her darkened room, in which everything has been left exactly as it was. In the meantime, Pamela has grown into a beautiful girl, loving and loved by all who know her.

On one of the anniversaries of Conchita's death the doctor pays his annual tribute to her memory in the room that was hers. Sitting with bowed head, the scrivener, he accidentally touches a spring which releases a secret panel. A sheaf of letters, bound with a faded ribbon, falls out. Idly curious, he picks them up and reads, at first with a stunned and uncomprehending mind, that his daughter, his Pamela, is not his daughter, but the child of another man. When the full realization of the grim truth bursts upon him, his mind becomes unbalanced. In a frenzy, he denounces Pamela, with wild, raving words, and drives her from his home into the rain. The girl becomes ill, but Dr. Rameau, temporarily brutalized from the fearful discovery he has made refuses to attend her, though his skill alone can avail to save her life.

Talvanne finally almost drags Dr. Rameau to the girl's bedside. Pamela throws her arms about his neck, and as she kisses him his anger and resentment fall from him like a garment. He recalls only the long years of love and tenderness he has lavished upon the child he believed to be his daughter. Dr. Rameau's skill wins in the battle with death, and at the wedding of Robert and Pamela, Talvanne sees for the first time, his old friend's head bowed in prayer, and hears brokenly from his lips the whispered words: "I thank Thee, O God."

The Light Brigade

Half an inch, half an inch, Half an inch shorter! Whether the skirts are for Mother or daughter! Briefer the dresses grow, Fuller the ripples flow, While whisking glimpses show, More than they oughter.

Flashed all their ankles there, Flashed as they turn in the air, What will not women dare? (Though the exhibits show Some of them blundered) All sorts and types of pegs—Broomsticks, piano legs, Here and there fairy shapes, Just built to walk on eggs, Come by the hundred.—Ex.

Rural Credits System

The following points on a rural credits system for Oregon have been proposed by Dr. Hector Macpherson, head of the U. S. and O. A. C. Bureau of Markets and Rural Organization:

1. Name: There is hereby established the Oregon Farm Mortgage Credit Association, which shall be a state institution with a branch in each county.

2. Purposes: The purposes of the Oregon Farm Mortgage Credit Association shall be to raise funds and make loans, secured by farm mortgages, throughout the State of Oregon.

3. State Farm Loan Commission: The Oregon Farm Mortgage Credit Association shall be under the control of the State Farm Loan Commission, which shall consist of the Governor of the State, Secretary of State, the State Treasurer, and Secretary of the State Land Board and five other members chosen to represent the Willamette Valley, Southern Oregon, the Coast Region, Northwestern Oregon, and Central Oregon, respectively.

They shall be chosen for their ability to handle financial matters, and from their acquaintance with the rural credit needs of their various districts. The Farm Mortgage Credit Commission shall appoint a general manager who shall be responsible to the commission for the general management of the Oregon Farm Mortgage Credit Association. The manager upon the approval of the State Farm Loan Commission, shall select his office force, appraisers and county representatives.

4. Membership: The members of the Oregon Farm Mortgage Credit Association shall be farm land owners who have affiliated themselves with one of its county branches who have complied with the Oregon State Law and with the regulations of the Oregon Farm Mortgage Credit Association and secured a loan upon their land through this association.

5. Raising Funds: The common school fund, under proper safeguards, shall constitute a revolving fund which, together with the accumulated net annual surplus shall be the original capital of the association. Upon the basis of the farm mortgages already let by the State of Oregon as security for the common school fund, the farm mortgage credit commission shall issue bonds in series of $100,000 or multiple thereof, the interest and principal of these bonds to be guaranteed by the State of Oregon.

6. Conditions of Securing Loans: Loans shall be made to farmers upon mortgages upon their land for an amount not to exceed 50 percent of the appraised value of such land, exclusive of perishable improve-

Poke Eazley's wagon is confined to the blacksmith shop, with a general breakdown.

When the folks of Hogwallow saw in the Tickville Tidings where the doctors of Chicago had taken a table knife ten inches long from the stomach of a woman who had swallowed it while suffering from typhoid fever, it caused much comment. Dock Hocks says he would not believe it if he had not seen it in the paper.

Wash Hocks, who by a jury, was found not guilty of stealing a lot of sweet potatoes from the Blind Man of the Calf Ribs neighborhood, will probably be re-arrested, as the potatoes, which he buried until the excitement died down, have sprouted and come up.

A lady friend from the Calf Ribs neighborhood is expected here this week, to be the guest of Miss Fritie Belcher. She will wear her best clothes and fix up her hair tight, and expects to make quite a favorable impression during her stay in this vicinity.

Sim Finders and Wash Hocks engaged in a shooting affray near the Dug Hill graveyard yesterday morning. Just before the difficulty took place a jury was summoned to witness the affair so that there would be no conflicting testimony at the trial.

After reading the annual crop report and finding that there were several billion bushels of corn raised last season, Jefferson P. Hocks has abandoned the idea of raising his usual two acres of corn the coming year, feeling that there will be plenty without it.

Raz Barlow, who was in Tickville last week for a day, sustained only slight injuries in a collision with the approaching Tickville accommodation train, as both were traveling at a slow rate of speed when the accident occurred.

The Wild Onion school teacher has cut out his geography class until the war is over, as the trustees would rather he would remain neutral throughout.

Miss Hostetter Hocks has been greatly puzzled for the past few days, as she has been unable, after a thorough search of the premises, to find her chewing gum she stung up somewhere.

A loan to any individual shall not exceed $50 upon each acre of land owned, nor shall it exceed $5,000 for each member. Each member shall make written application for a loan upon forms to be secured from the county branch of the Oregon Farm Mortgage Credit Association, and in this application he shall submit in detail the purposes to which he intends to apply the loan, and no part thereof shall, under any circumstances, be applied to any other purpose.

Interest and principal of all loans shall be payable upon the amortization plan in quarterly, semi-annual, or annual installments. At the end of three years, however, from the date of securing a loan, the borrower shall have the privilege of paying off in addition to his regular amortization installment, any additional portion of the loan he sees fit, and his future amortization installments shall include interest only upon that part of the loan remaining unpaid.

Each farmer obtaining a loan shall submit to a survey of his farm and equipment according to the forms used by the division of Farm Management of the United States Department of Agriculture. These forms are to be filled out before he obtains a loan, and at the end of each calendar year so long as he remains a debtor to the Oregon Farm Mortgage Credit Association.

Boy Breaks Wrist. One day last week Charles Peterson, of Riverport, brought his ten year old son to this place to have Dr. V. L.
