For County Commissioner

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for County Commissioner of Coos County on the Republican ticket in the May Primaries. Very truly yours,
J. T. HARRIGAN.

The Weather

The oldest inhabitant is backed off the boards in the matter of weather, and none of them can recall a time when snow has made its appearance for so long a time. More has fallen at one clatter, but repeated falls of snow, continued for weeks, have been unknown. Cattle and sheep have suffered severely, not only from lack of feed but from the extended exposure to which they are not acclimated. About the only consolation we have is that it has been worse everywhere else.

Lucky Cows

J. N. Jacobson is inclined to think that he is somewhat favored of the gods. Last Friday night the weight of the snow brought down the roof of a large shed in which the cows which supply the sanitary milk which he retails around town in his electric lighted milk wagon, find shelter when they want it. The roof came down in the night, and the cows were undoubtedly under it but none were injured, although four of them showed scratches and bruises the next morning.

Farmers Will Frolic

Invitations have been issued to a "Farmers' Frolic" to be held Thursday, Feb. 3rd at Geo. P. Laird's big new barn near Riverton. The invitation is signed by Geo. P. Laird, M. G. Lutsey, J. T. Jenkins, J. E. Belloni, J. D. Cull, Geo. R. Johnson, H. B. Warner and J. L. Smith, the entertainment committee. Everybody is invited to come and bring a big smile and a basket of eats, and "get together."

The County Debates

The debating team sent by C. H. S. to North Bend last Friday was defeated, the decision being unanimous in favor of the North Bend team. The team which debated Myrtle Point at this place was also defeated, Myrtle Point receiving two votes and Coquille, one. As Myrtle Point and North Bend each won with both their teams, they will contest for the county championship next Friday.

Safe Moved

Saturday morning the safe in the Recorder's office was moved to a corner of the room on account of it making the floor sag in quite an alarming manner in the place it had been occupying. Marshall Hickam and several others were engaged until a late hour in the forenoon on this task. The safe being of great weight made quite an impression on the floor. It was feared that it might crush through the floor or else topple over as it was leaning forward at quite an angle.

Keeping a Tryst

So why the young man approached the appointed spot. Glancing over his shoulder every few seconds to see if he was being followed, he gradually moved closer to the high backed bench. Pausing, he pulled his trusty dollar watch from his checkered vest pocket and gazed that cider formed on the stomach which caused the cider to intoxicate, if it really did intoxicate, but he declined to swear to it. He said that the young men who became intoxicated on the beverage did so by the aid of lemon extract which they poured into the cider. Mr. Machon said that if any man in the house would pour a few ounces of the extract into a certain amount of cider and drink it, in less than three hours he would be "laid out." He further stated that if they were not, he himself would eat it. Whereupon the Judge had to call order in the court.

CIDER HAS TOO MUCH ALCOHOL

His testimony was very strong and he stated again and again that he was unaware of the cider containing more alcohol than the law allows—one-half of one per cent. He said that upon the officers obtaining a sample of his cider to test a couple of weeks ago, Liljeqvist told him that he would be notified by John Hickam the following morning whether he would be allowed to sell it or not. He said that he is still waiting for Hickam to show up and do the notifying. He explained that he had traveled around a great deal and had resided at a great many places but that never before had he been arrested for any offense or he was ever up before a court. He ended by saying that this was the first time and he hoped to the good Lord it was the last.

Albert Johnson then took the stand and said that he had no idea that the cider contained alcohol over one-half of one per cent. He has a standard tester and he claims that he tests all the cider sent out. The tester was purchased from C. J. Fuhrman who also had faith in it, Mr. Johnson stated.

H. W. Dunham took the stand next and substantiated Mr. Machon's testimony in regard to Liljeqvist promising to warn them, or to send Hickam to warn them if the cider was pronounced to contain too much alcohol. Mr. Liljeqvist denied this statement and Dunham reiterated again and again that it was the truth. Mr. Dunham's testimony on this point was stricken out.

The case was then adjourned until the following morning at 9 o'clock. Before the Judge left the bench he was called upon to decide an argument between Liljeqvist and Barrow in regard to Lil forbidding Barrow to ask a certain question of the defendant. Lil made a very good appeal to the Judge, whereupon Mr. Barrow sprang to his feet and said that never in all his career did he ever hear an attorney utter such remarks. When he resumed his seat Lil informed the Judge that never before did he have the pleasure of hearing a man allow his mouth run away with his brain. The Judge then said that he would render his decision on the matter on the following morning.

Friday morning the case was resumed before a crowded house.

Lester Donaldson was called up again and was asked if soda pop or root beer had ever affected him the way the cider had done. He said that though soda he had drunk had made tears come to his eyes, it had never had the same effect that the cider had.

Sheriff Johnson was the next witness called and merely told about getting cider for samples.

Then Liljeqvist and Barrow entered into a prolonged argument on certain dry and wet laws. Barrow claimed that he had made the law himself or had helped to in the legislature. Lil said that he was sorry that Mr. Barrow had gone there and come away with such little knowledge of the law after being where it was made.

J. Lee Brown, the Marshfield chemist who analyzed the cider, was the next witness called. He claimed that with the tester with which Johnson tested his cider it was impossible to get the amount of alcohol that the cider contained, as it was not made to test alcohol in any dense liquid like cider.

Attorney Barrow then in a cross counter attack attempted to confuse Mr. Brown. He sprung a question on him about chemistry, in answer to which Mr. Brown informed him that he was several years behind the times on chemistry; whereat Lil's smile was really pronounced. Marshal John Hickam was the

Cold Kills Birds

The cold weather is certainly hard on the birds. The hunters at this place felt very bad this week when they learned that five of the imported Hungarian quail had died from the cold out in the Fairview country. These birds have been here a couple of years and were doing nicely until this year. It's hard to tell how many of them have suffered. Feed was sent out from this place by hunters.

The cold weather was also hard on the China pheasants. Three of them were found dead last week. They were just beginning to thrive here and it will be deplorable if they are killed off by the inclement weather.

Candidacy of Judge Moore

The announcement of the candidacy of Judge F. A. Moore for re-election as a member of the Supreme Court was made last week and is of much interest to his admiring friends in Coos County, who take a sincere pleasure in voting for men of his high order of intelligence, honesty, fairness and ability.

Judge Moore has served the people of Oregon for a quarter of a century as a member of the Supreme Bench; is at present the Chief Justice of that Honorable Body, and has served as Chief Justice four terms. During all this time he has established himself in the next witness and he said that he was satisfied that the boys had been getting drunk on cider but he wouldn't swear to it.

Alaskan Thrush Seen Here

Every day someone can be seen pointing out a certain kind of a bird that appears on the streets and asking what kind of a bird it is. The bird in question is about the size of our robin red breast though of a different color, with striped wings and a black ring around its throat. This bird is an Alaskan thrush. In the summer thousands of these birds can be seen in Alaska but with the coming of winter they migrate south. The old settlers here can remember when there were none of these birds here. Since they started coming to this place they have been called myrtle robins on account of their seeming preference to myrtle trees to roost in and stay around. In the summer they all migrate north again. There are hundreds of them here this year.

Mr. Liljeqvist addressed the jury in a strong appeal for enforcement of the law. He said that the law should be enforced but at the same time he informed the Judge that he didn't think that the accused should be dealt with too severely. He said he was not after Machon's scalp but that he merely wished the law to be observed and enforced.

Mr. Barrow addressed the jury until the coming of high noon, which induced all hands to adjourn for dinner.

The jury retired at one o'clock and at 1:45 brought in a verdict of guilty.

Sentence was reserved until the next morning, when Justice Stanley imposed a fine of $100 and costs with the understanding that if the costs were paid the fine would be suspended. Mr. Machon later paid the costs.

The only other complaint formally filed was against Albert Johnson. This case is being held up at present. Mr. Johnson has sent a sample of the cider to a chemist for analysis and wishes to get returns from that before his case is called. Sheriff Johnson has also sent to J. Lee Brown a sample received from Powers, and another case may arise from that.

Mr. Machon is inclined to think that he has been made the goat, and there are many who agree with him.

Tried to Escape

A dispatch to the Times tells of the attempt of A. M. Jennings, the hold-up man, to escape at Eugene while he was being taken to the pen from this county with four others in charge of Laird and Shoup. They went out over the Willamette-Pacific route and the prisoners were lodged in the Lane county jail awaiting the arrival of the train. Jennings attempted to file the lock of his cell and liberate himself. Sheriff Johnson is now wondering where Jennings obtained the file, as he was thoroughly searched before leaving here. This search was so thorough that it turned up a narrow piece of tin that Jennings had concealed in the seam of his overalls. It is about three inches long and an eighth of an inch wide, and was intended for the purpose of springing the catches on a handcuff. A piece of brass was also taken from him which he had partly fashioned into a key by the use of a nail file.
