The Oregon Power Co. is making good progress on the power line it is building to the county poor farm and expects to have it completed in about 30 days. Incidentally it is giving the farmers along the way a chance to put in the latest improvements in the way of electric power on the farm.
Last week considerable painting was done in Coquille. C. J. Fuhrman's pharmacy was gone over with a new coat of paint. Clark & Cleg-horn's bakery and grocery was also adorned with a new coat. The man who leaned up against one of the city's electric light posts was out of luck, for they also sported a good share of fresh paint.

To Save Poet's Birthplace
Mrs. Epperson, secretary of the Woman's Study Club, asks the Herald to give publicity to an appeal sent out some time ago by the Portland Longfellow Club, asking for contributions to save the poet's birthplace from being lost to the International Longfellow Society through sale under a mortgage. It is stated that:
On October 28, 1914 the Longfellow birthplace was dedicated as a permanent Longfellow memorial under the auspices of the International Longfellow Society, the governor and a distinguished company of men and women participating. The whole interior has been restored and a wonderful transformation has been wrought. Today the old house stands dignified and prosperous looking, a perfect example of the Colonial mansion which it was.
Unfortunately no statement is made of the amount of incumbrance on the place or of the amount of money required, but there is little danger of too many contributions.
Contributions to the Longfellow Birthplace fund will be received for the next thirty days by this paper and will be acknowledged in these columns.

Grave to Let
Coquille gossip claims that Marshal John Hickam was called upon to execute a dog that had been in the city pound for some time. John tied a rope on the dog and leading him with one hand and carrying a spade in the other he proceeded a good distance out in the woods back of the city. He also sported his trusty six gun with which to put the canine out of his misery. Reaching the woods he made the dog fast to a tree and began spading out his grave. In the meantime the dog began howling and struggling to get free. With the grave almost completed, and the howls ringing in his ears, John lost his temper. He lifted the spade and made a swoop at the dog but that animal saw the spade descending and ducked. The sharp edge of it struck the dog's neck and severed it close to the dog's neck. With a joyful yelp it tore off through the woods, leaving John standing beside the open grave. The cop denies the story.

Jim Laird was in from Brewster valley Sunday with a brand new Ford auto truck. The new car evidently took a great liking to our little city, for when Jim started to crank it up to return home it refused to go. After much coaxing he got it started and then it stopped on him again. He repeated the performance seven times before he finally got it under headway. Jim departed mid the well wishes of his friends, but his face wore a very doubtful look as he steered the little truck up the street for he knows that the tricks of the Ford are many.

Big Slide at Wedderburn
The store, postoffice, warehouse and five dwelling houses at Wedderburn were threatened with destruction during a heavy downpour of rain last Friday. Shortly after noon on that day the hills back of this portion of the town commenced to slide, and one after another eight different slides occurred. At the first warning the people living in the threatened section fled from their homes to a point of safety. Yard fences were demolished, and one house, against which the mud and debris was piled six feet high, was moved from its foundation and the rear door broken open and the room filled with dirt.
Those who were compelled to leave their homes, with their families, were T. L. Carey, Superintendent of the Wedderburn Trading Co., Postmaster C. L. Wakeman, Bookkeeper H. E. Beck, Frank Huett, Robt. Fromm, and Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Stewart who were visiting at the Carey home. The party, about thirty in all, took refuge in the Lodge, a building built by R. L. Macleay to entertain his friends, which furnished ample accommodations for all.
The slide in coming down a ravine brought up fairly against the big warehouse, smashing in the doors and filling the building with debris back some thirty feet from its entrance. More damage would have probably been done had the several slides come at the same time. What caused the greatest uneasiness, however, was that the hills had cracked and settled about two feet, whereif they had given away they would have come down with such force that all of the buildings mentioned above would have been swept into the river.
A small slide filled the reservoir and shut off the town's water supply.
Unusually heavy rains following a long cold spell during which the ground was frozen, is thought to have caused the trouble.—Port Orford Tribune.

Basket Ball
The basket ball game Thursday night at this place between Myrtle Point and Coquille Independent teams resulted in an overwhelming victory for Coquille by a score of 42 to 17. It was a very one sided contest throughout despite many attempts at "roughing it." The local team showed up to fine advantage and pulled off plays that completely baffled the Myrtle Pointers. They took a long lead at the very start which they maintained throughout the entire game.
The game between the married ladies and the High school girls was very interesting and caused a great deal of rooting from the side lines. The High school team put up a very good game but the married ladies outplayed them in all departments of the game and at the end of the last half the score stood 9 to 5 in their favor. It seems as if the High school girls are a hungry bunch and can't put up a good game unless there are "cats" in sight for the victors.

Poor Target Practice Lands Michaels in Jail

James Hobson is carrying on a farm in a sink and Leo Michaels is under a thousand dollar bond as the result of a shooting match which occurred near Myrtle Point Thursday night. It is stated that Michaels went to Hobson's after a ton of hay which belonged to him, but that Hobson's hired help refused to let him have it, saying that that was the order issued by Hobson. They informed Michaels that the boss would be back about 6 o'clock that evening, so he decided to wait till he showed up. When Hobson finally arrived he refused Michaels the hay and told him to leave the place at once. A few words were exchanged and Hobson, it is said, lost his temper and almost his life, at the same time. He swung off the horse he was riding to carry out a threat of putting Michaels off the place, and was greeted with quite a warm reception from a revolver in Michaels' hand which caused him to suddenly change his mind and he beat a hasty retreat. Michaels plainly demonstrated that he was no Kit Carson nor Buffalo Bill when it came to slinging lead. By the time he had sent 5 leaden pellets after Hobson's retreating form he had secured two hits. One bullet lodged in the flank of Hobson's horse and the other found a resting place in his wrist. An officer from Myrtle Point was summoned and went down to the ranch and put Michaels under arrest. He was brought to this place the same evening and placed in jail, but bonds were soon furnished for him and he was released the next morning. There were plenty of men willing to go his bail. There seem to be very few people who were acquainted with the circumstances that do not uphold Michaels. He is a cripple and unable to protect himself except with an "equalizer."

School Notes
The Coquille excursionists failed to see the terrific potato battle which the Marshfield Record describes as having taken place on the occasion of the recent basket ball trip to Bandon. One potato was thrown which, unfortunately, struck one of the ladies of the Coquille party causing her considerable suffering for the remainder of the trip; but to suggest that there was a general scrimmage is absurd. The Coquille people were shown every courtesy by the Bandon students and the one act of one misguided individual was the only unpleasant circumstance of an otherwise enjoyable visit to the City by the Sea.
"Have you had your picture taken?" This is the question most frequently asked among the High school students these days. The "Laurel" staff are hard after the various classes, clubs and individuals who are to have their pictures in the annual, urging that photos be taken right away so that there may be no delay in getting the cuffs made. And, by the way, it seems that the annual is still to be "The Laurel." The seniors considered changing the name but no one came forward with anything that sounded better than the one to which all have become accustomed, so "The Laurel" it is likely to continue to be called for years to come.
The physics class inspected the plant of the Oregon Power Company Monday afternoon.
W. H. Lyons has donated the use of his tract of land in the north end of town for baseball practice during the spring. The High school boys expect to organize a team and hope to play at least two or three games in the course of the season. One game will be played at Bandon at the time of the annual High school excursion.
Eighteen school men of the county were present at the meeting of the Coos County Round Table Association here last Saturday. North Bend was the only city school of the county not represented. The principal speaker of the occasion was Dr. E. S. Conklin of Oregon University.
