Use This Paper as a Guide

When you have a want to fill turn to the advertising columns of The Herald and see what suggestions they have to offer. Before you start on a shopping trip ascertain what the stores are showing. Look at the advertising from time to time for new ideas. It pays to patronize advertisers because they must back up their advertising or it will not be profitable. No manufacturer or merchant can afford to spend money advertising a lie.

...BUY AT HOME...

Don't run your dollar out of town; let the poor thing stay; Buy At Home. If you buy out of town, and we buy out of town, and our neighbors buy out of town, what in thunder will become of our town?

A New Ten Commandments

1. Thou shalt not go away from home to do thy trading; thou nor thy wife, nor thy sons, nor thy daughters.
2. Thou shalt patronize thine own mechanics, also the printer, and they shall patronize thee.
3. Thou shalt patronize thine own merchants; that they may not be driven from their homes to find food for their little ones.
4. Thou shalt pay thy bills promptly, that thy credit may be good in the land where thou dwellest, and thy neighbors greet thee gladly.
5. Thou shalt not knock props from under thine own town in order to be revenged on thine enemy, lest thou perish with him.
6. Thou shalt not incline thine ear to the voice of pride nor permit vanity to overcome thine heart.
7. Thou shalt spend thine earnings at home, that they may return whence they came and give nourishment to such as come after thee.
8. Thou shalt not bear false witness against the town wherein thou dwellest but shalt speak well of it in the ears of all men.
9. Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's seed wheat nor his stove wood nor his yearling nor his meat hog nor the corn that is in his crib, but whatsoever thou desirest, thou shalt buy of him that hath to sell, and thou shalt pay the price thereof in the coin of the realm.
10. Thou shalt keep these commandments and teach them to thy children unto the third and fourth generations, that they may be made to flourish and wax rich when thou art laid to rest with thy fathers. — Ex.

IN JUSTICE TO OREGON

The Portland Chamber of Commerce is pushing the campaign for the support of the Sinnott bill, now before congress. It will be remembered that the Oregon-California Land Grant bill, as passed, provides that the money from the sale of the land shall be divided as follows: Twenty-five per cent to the State School Fund, 25 per cent to the land grant counties, 40 per cent to the general reclamation fund and 10 per cent to the Federal Treasury. The only change made by the Sinnott bill is the provision that instead of going to the general reclamation fund, to be expended in any state that seems to desire a slice of it the worst, the 40 per cent shall be expended on reclamation work in Oregon. The simple justice of this is too apparent to require argument, but it seems that when the land grant bill was passed the chance for other states to reach their hands into Oregon's pocket was too tempting, and Congress would not forego the opportunity. It is hoped that by bringing the issue squarely up by itself, and by making an appeal to the sense of fair play that is supposed to reside somewhere in the breasts of the American people, Congress may be induced to see the light.

But we should not lose sight of the fact that "easy money" looks very tempting to every other state that has reclamation projects of its own, and their representatives will put forth every effort to retain the chance to get some of it. It is up to the people of Oregon to look out for their own interests and to make such a disturbance that Congress may be impelled to do the right thing. The land is a resource of Oregon, and the money should be expended for the benefit of this state. The rank injustice of giving it to any other commonwealth is so plain that it need only be called to the attention of the general public with sufficient force to have a decided influence on Congress. Every reader of this paper should do his part, and no better way seems to be suggested than that of writing letters as is urged by the Portland Chamber of Commerce.

SPRAY FROM THE SURF

By Rory O'Moore

We Won't Stand for it

A reader of The Herald confessed to us the other day that he thought this column was made up of matter selected from eminent writers. We refused to be so classed. The poems appearing in this column are all by local writers and those not marked "contributed" are written by The Herald's special writer, Rory O'Moore, and appear nowhere else. Contributions are always welcome and should be addressed Rory O'Moore, care Herald.

And this week a girl,
Who knew I was tired
Of reading my own poetry—
And who was, perhaps,
Also tired
Of reading my own poetry—
Took pity on me
And contributed
Some of her own poetry.
And I like it
And I print it
In place of my own poetry.

The Way of the World

Another year has passed into God's keeping.
Joys and sorrows has it known—and bitter rue,
And, shrinking on the New Year's snowy threshold,
My longing heart cries out, in vain, for you.
Come to me e'er fleeting life is finished,
And kiss me for the sake of long ago,
Hold my hands in yours as once you used to,
And whisper love's sweet story soft and low.
But I want you, oh, I want you now and ever,
I want to feel your lips on mine and hear your words of fire.
Sweetheart, had I a million tongues at my command,
They all would voice the same intense desire.

If I should be the first to take that journey
To the distant land of silent Stygian night,
Think of me, Sweetheart, while yet you linger
In the bright and happy realm of life and light.
Think of me when you pass down the road—our road,
With all its shimmering wealth of goldenrod,
Think of me when purple twilight comes,
And night is creeping softly o'er the sod.

Think of me as one who loved you dearly,
Who loved you long and never ceased to care,
Since first I met you in that golden summer,
When life was like a story, without a sigh or care.

I do not blame myself for having loved you,
No woman living but would have loved the same,
Had you wooed her as you wooed me that summer,
With your tawny hair, your laughter sweet, and lovelit eyes aflame.

If once, but once, before I die,
I might be clasped in your protecting arms,
Held close, so close within their loving fold,
Secure from all life's illusions, earth's alarms.
But we shall meet, perhaps e'er long, in Paradise,
Where loved ones never part and none can die,
For that eternal summer day I wait,
'Till then, good-by, good-by, good-by.

Gee! Yesterday I thought of dying,
Raved about the cold and snow,
Today I'd like to live forever—
Got another beau!

—UNEZ MORTON.

Parodies on Quotations

Be the play weary, or be the plot wrong,
Judicious billing will make it go strong.
Lives of forgers oft remind us
We can turn "thine" into "mine,"
And deceamping, leave behind us
Things we had no right to sign.
It's better to have loved a short than never to have loved a tall.
Never put off till tomorrow what you can get somebody to do today.

$100 Reward, $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dread disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.
