"We believe that the unification of regulation is essential," said Judge Lovett, "and that with the rapid increase of state commissions in recent years congress will in time be compelled to exercise its power in the premises. To unify regulation there hould be a complete, harmonious, consistent and related system. We be-lieve the best, if not the only practical plan, is the federal incorporation of railroads by general law, which will make incorporation thereunder compulsory, thus imposing on all railroad companies throughout the United States the same corporate powers and restrictions with respect to their financial operations and the same duties and obligations to the public and the government, so that every investor will know precisely what every railroad corporation may and may not lawfully

Judge Lovett contended that the so lution of these problems and difficulties rested with congress. He told the committee that under the constitution the authority of the federal govern ment is paramount, that congress has the power to legislate for a centralized control of railroads under federal char ters and that it only remains for that body to exercise that power.
