MANY FISH TO

Fish of the Oregon rivers and the Alaskan coast are to be hunted as never before as part of the campaign to increase the food resources of the United States.

This impetus is the result of the urging of William C. Redfield, secretary of the United States department of commerce. The bureau of fisheries is preparing an educational drive to acquaint the people of the nation with advantage; of sea food, and particularly with species of fish which have not generally been introduced.

There will be no waste in any of the canneries from Oregon to the most northern plant. This, too, is recommended by the government.

Not only are the cannery people de sirous of increasing the pack, but they are also co-operating with the government in the matter of boats. All craft of any suitable size, having power, are to be listed and made available for governmental purposes at the end of the fishing season.

The nation will have to depend to a large extent on the fisheries of the Pacific Coast this year because thousands of the fish boats on the Atlantic are already in the government service for patroling.

There are more fishboats in the Colubia river today than in any previous season in years. The price for raw fish has mounted and this means it will cost more to the consumer.

Other Fish Available.

Aside from the salmon, there are other fish available and the government wants these taken in as large quantities as possible. Off the Oregon coast is one of the largest halibut banks in the world. The presence of this halibut bank is not generally known. Halibut along the Alaskan coast have greatly diminished, they have been sought so persistently, until now the halibut fishers must sail far to the north to get a supply. The halibut off the coast of Oregon is readily accessible and be enrolled in the United States Boys' the fish are of the finest grade.

Tons of herring can be had almost as quickly as a load of smelt can be gathered in a run on the Cowlitz or the Sandy. Pickled herring is likely to become a staple within a short time. The Alaskan mackerel, pickled, is a relatively new food fish and the government asks that this be caught.

Superintendent of Schools J. A. Commercial Club Wednesday evening for a short time and after commending the efficient corps of teachers here, said he wanted to tell Coquille people what they already knew, that our school buildings are not what the y should be. In other respects our schools are up to the average but in the matter of modern structure we are below par. He expressed the tope that he might have the pleasure of dedicating a new high school build ng here at a not greatly distant date

After Mr. Churchill's departure, F B. Phillips, among other things, said he thought it was time the people of Coquille went earnestly to work to have a new high school building, and that his experience at Cottage Grove proved that to accomplish such a re sult it was necessary to choose for directors men who would make that the one important object of their erm on the board. In the same con nection F. E. McKenna suggested that o endorse for school director at the innual June school meeting.

R. H. Mast, chairman of the bridge ommittee, stated that they had seured an option from J. A. A. T. Morrison reported that there vere apout 500 people present at the Good Roads meeting in Portland last aturday, practically all of whom faored the bond issue. But there was lack of organization evident and it vas to remedy this defect and make a trong campaign that the meeting was held. He said that Highway Simmissioner Adams made an even etter presentation of the bond supports' side of the issue than when the latter was in Coos county a month ago and put to rout all those who are fighting the issue with his irrefutable gic and common sense arguments.

The reports from various section of the state indicate that when the whole proposition is made clear and xplained the opponents of the $6,-000,000 issue lose their following and it is believed that the vote on the measure will be favorable.

The Club voted a contribution to th loos county good roads campaign and then adjourned.
