Fire at Yreka.

Considerable excitement was created on the streets Monday afternoon by bulletins stating that Yreka was on fire, and considering the extreme dryness of the season, it was feared the town would burn up.

The fire started from the range of the Clarendon hotel, a two-story brick, at 12:15, when people were headed for their bedrooms, who immediately put the two hand engines to work pumping water over the building while the look and ladder outfit did excellent service in removing the wooden buildings near by to prevent carrying the fire to adjoining buildings, particularly a large livery stable in the rear, which wet blankets and buckets were also applied, effectively confining the fire to the building.

Lumber, Rock, hardware store, in Red Men's Hall block adjoining on the west, received considerable damage by the fire. Total loss will be about $8000, with about 50 per cent insurance. This fire came in just the right time of day and in a place near cisterns, and an engine house, and no wind blowing, which saved the whole town from total destruction, as it would have done if not quenched.

The fire broke out in the rear of the livery stable in the rear, which wet blankets and buckets were also applied, effectively confining the fire to the building.

Pickett, Sec'y; B. S. Webb, P. Sec'y; L. A. Angle, Treas.; Frank Aman, Warden; S. H. Brown, S. W. G.; J. G. Webb, R. S. G.; T. W. Johnson, L. S. N. G.; E. P. Geary, R. S. V. G.; W. I. Vawter, L. S. V. G.; S. H. McGehee, O. S. G.; K. K. Kinsley, I. S. G.; A. C. Nicholson, R. S. S.; L. M. Lyon, L. S. S.

An Unusual Storm.

One of the severest storms ever seen in this country since settled by white men occurred Tuesday evening. After a warm sultry day, lightning began to fly, thunder to clap and rain to pour from the sky. The rain lasted for a few hours, during which time the street drains and other low places were all soon running, and a great deal of water was run off.

Some damage was done in knocking the early fruit from the trees in the orchards herabouts, but this will be more than compensated by the aid the rain will give to the trees and the maturing late fruits.

The storm was more severe and far reaching in its consequences from the outskirts of the town on the west and north sides down to and including the Wagner creek section, two heavy leaden clouds having seemingly come together and then doubled their energies in pouring down the water and hail stones as large as bullets from the clouds of Bear creek and Myer, and other ranches it thrashed practically all the grain crops on the ground and the water floated it off into the dry canyons, and in some places, swollen streams, which hurriedly carried it into the main stream, Bear creek. At John Real's place north of town it washed down the hillside, and in some places, the fences, filling cleared lands with boulders and debris, many of the fruit trees were skinned of their foliage and fruit, and some of the property was washed out. This to some people is rather a trying ordeal, and would prevent many from signing the petition, to get the Ashland State Normal school, for their own benefit.
