VALLEY RECORD.

ASHLAND, Or....Thursday, Oct. 2, 1890

The census bureau announces Oakland, Cal., at 48,590, an increase of 14,035; Sacramento, 26,272, increase of 4,852; Stockton, 14,376, increase of 4,094.

The postoffice authorities have seized the entire weekly edition of the Cincinnatti Volksfreund because it contained lottery advertisements.

Prince Bismarck and his secretary, Herr Bucher, are engaged at Varzin in compiling the memoirs of the events in which the prince figured while in affairs of state.

Hon. J. M. Bush, a red hot democratic editor of Pike county, Ill., is visiting the coast. This is his estimate of the republican party: "Take the negroes from the bottom, and the trusts and monopolies from the top, and the remainder would not make a respectable corporal's guard."

A missionary report from China says that among the cases treated in the London Missionary Hospital at Pekin was one of a youth who had removed a portion of the flesh from the calf of his leg in order to make soup for his sick father. His father died notwithstanding this act of devotion.

The receipts of the fair this year will allow the directors to pay off all premiums and have money left. Much well-deserved praise is being given the secretary, Col. Robt. A. Miller, for the able business like methods that made the fair such a marked success this year. Col. Miller had nothing to do with the track management, which was entirely in different hands, and hence comes out with a clear record and flying colors.

The Multnomah county grand jury found a true bill against the mayor and city council of Portland for jointly maintaining and operating a nuisance in the shape of a cremator for burning refuse matter. The district attorney drew up a bill of indictment against Manager Burlbach, but refused to do so in the case of the mayor and city council, for the reason that he was of the opinion that a conviction could not be had before a jury.

Eugene Dispatch: It has been learned that several parties in the vicinity have been swindled by a timber claim sharp by the name of W. A. Caborn. He has been locating claims and offering to find purchasers for them when they were proved up. In some instances he received a fee for locating, and in others he received only a location fee of $10. When the time came for parties to prove up Caborn was not to be found, and only a small percentage of the locators will hold their claims.

The anti-lottery bill passed by congress and signed by the president is now in operation. Its provisions are stringent and have only to be enforced to suppress the demoralizing traffic at which it is aimed, striking as it does both at the agents and patrons in any lottery concern. It is made criminal for any officer or agent of the company, or any persons in any part of the United States to mail any lottery communication, letter, postal, circular, ticket, money order, check or draft, and closes the mails to every newspaper publishing advertisements of a lottery or announcements of its drawings. The bill also aims an effective blow at any bank or other concern under whose cover a company may seek to do its business—the postmaster-general being empowered to direct any local postmaster not to deliver registered letters to any person or company engaged in the lottery business, or the agent of such person or company. The old lottery law was rendered worthless by the indisposition of the courts in Louisiana to enforce it, but the operation of this law cannot be baffled in this way, as its enforcement is not left solely to the courts.

The Farmer and the Apple Market

The following article from a California farmer to the Salinas Index will apply to Oregon farmers just as well as to California farmers, perhaps more so. Read it.

What's the matter with the farmers? Here is a year of fair market prices for most kinds of produce, and many of our farmers are giving their stuff away as usual. Crowding wheat on the market while freights are 46s. 3d. when by holding back a few weeks they could find ships at 35s. and pocket the difference themselves.

Why don't farmers make more use of the newspaper?

Only a few days ago I heard of a farmers in Salinas selling his apple crop for future delivery, at fifty cents a box. If that man had kept himself posted he might have known that apples from some trees were selling last February for $3 a box, and in all likelihood, be worth more than that this year, as reports from the east chronicle the failure of the eastern crops.

San Francisco commission merchants are already looking around for supplies of winter apples, offering to buy on threes even in so remote a district as this. Those of our orchardists who have winter apples, will find it to their interest to handle them as carefully as eggs—no dumping or rolling them from box to basket—put them in a cool place and keep until January or later. Pack in boxes 10x11x22 inches and grade in three sizes. No. 1, four apples span the box; No. 2, five to a span; No. 3, six or seven to the span. And pack honestly the same sizes all through, good sound fruit, and you'll get well paid. I got as high $1.75 for No. 3's last winter.

Don't dump your fruit, all kinds and sizes, into coal oil boxes and rush it off to the nearest store, and trade it for 40 cents a box, and then blame Providence because you can't make a living!

You can get new boxes for six cents apiece, and make enough off a few boxes of apples to pay the price of your paper half a dozen times over. It pays, you'll find, to keep yourself posted. Knowing how and when to sell is a chief part in farming.

Workingmen cannot afford to lose time. Simmons Liver Regulator will keep you from it.

Indians cannot have whisky under the law, even for medicine. W. H. McBride, a druggist of Adams, Umatilla county, sold liquor to Indians on a prescription. The United States district attorney holds that the law has been violated and Mr. McBride will, accordingly, pay a visit to Judge Deady.

You feel faint and sick in the stomach—no appetite. Take Simmons Liver Regulator.

The "Bouncing" of Gen. Applegate.

Ned H. Pell, the Salem Statesman's professional funny man writes: General E. L. Applegate (Lish) was a standing candidate for United States senator from Oregon for twenty-odd long years, and the only thing in the world that kept him from going there was a dearth of votes. He planted hopes and irrigated them with the overflowing waters of a yearning heart, but the never reaped votes to any appreciable extent. At last Lish crawled down off his high pedestal and lowered his aim long enough to apply for the position of Indian agent at the Klamath reservation. He unhitched his lines from the star and tied them to the blanket of a lop-eared Klamath squaw. But Lish was born early into the world of trouble, and his has been a hard-scrabble mountain of life. He has been like a tender flower, cut down like pepper grass; yesterday he was a daisy, to-day he's like apple sass, or words to that effect. Well, "Lish" was appointed Injun agent, on the recommendation of Senator Mitchell. Now the Injun department requires every Injun agent to pray. The longer-winded he is in his petiton to the throne of grace in behalf of the poor, scrofula-stricken sons and daughters of the forest, the better agent he is supposed to be. But Lish don't pray. Not only did he refuse to pray himself, but he wouldn't allow anybody else to pray. The United States government, through its big Injun department, remonstrated with Lish and told him no pray no pay. Then Lish started in to convert the government of the United States to his theories, and the instrument he employed to proselyte the republic was his prolific pen. He fired in his arguments thick and fast, but the only effect was a request for Lish to resign. That was adding gall to wormwood, pouring hot lead into his wounds. Resign! Not much! Lish isnt of the resigning kind. He ain't built that way. The result is that Lish has been fired, and the infamies of the dark ages are all done over again! History has again performed the act, contrary to the Australian system, of repeating itself, and Lish is a mourner at the tomb of a lost people. Lish is certainly a good subject for prayer.

INGALLS AND CARLISLE.

A close friendship is said to have sprung up between Senators Ingalls and Carlisle. To a friend who spoke to him about it Ingalls said: "Do you know how I was first attracted to him? I read in a newspapers that when his election for senator was pending before the Kentucky legislature he was so short of money that he arrived in Frankfort with only 15 cents in his pocket. I exclaimed that's the kind of men we want in the senate; no mere millionaires. Gives us poor men of brain and integrity. The more intimately I have become acquainted with Mr. Carlisle, the more I esteem him. Setting politics aside, he is the kind of stuff that senators should be made of."

There is a general kick at the horse racing at the late fair. It is charged that they were not conducted on even the "dead thieving square." Owners and drivers are charged with putting money on the winning horse and taking second money. Judges are accused of buying pools, and other rank performances are mentioned. Everybody seems to have bet on the wrong animal.

Porter, the census man, made quite a reputation writing editorials for the tar iff boodlers, and by pandering to the low instincts of human prejudice succeeded in passing himself off among intense republicans as being a man of ability. The responsible position of superintendent of the census tested his ability, and his defence against granting a recount in Oregon shows up the last remaining picture, his character, in a decidedly unsavory manner. He was one of the vilest, nastiest, dirtiest defamers of Mr. Cleveland and along with other stinking partisan journals published the string of falsehoods in the Harrison campaign, purporting to be quotations from leading democrats about free trade, the Irish, etc. But retribution has come, and the RECORD will not shed a tear over his complete disgrace.

Remarkable Rescue.

Mrs Michael Curtain, Plainfield, Ill., makes the statement that she caught cold, which settled on her lungs; she was treated for a month by her family physician, but grew worse. He told her she was a hopeless victim of consumption, and that no medicine could cure her. Her druggist suggested Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, she bought a bottle and to her delight found herself benefitted from first dose. She continued its use and after taking ten bottles, found herself sound and well, now does her own housework and is well as she ever was.—Free trial bottles of this Great Discovery at Chitwood Bros., drug store, large bottles 50c. and $1.

Wright's Sarsaparilla will cure the most obstinate skin diseases, renovate the whole system, and put your life on a new basis. Sold by T. K. Bolton.

The Astorian tells this story: About a quarter of a century ago, when Charles M. Winant—now city marshal of Newport—was a small boy, he was sitting one day on his father's knee in their house at Bruceport, Wash. John B. Rose, now under sentence of death in Pacific county, Washington, had a grudge against Mr. Jed. Winant at that time, and fired through the window of the house at Mr. Winant and his son while they were sitting as described above. Fortunate the bullet missed its mark, and neither the farther nor son were injured, but the would-be murderer of a quarter of a century ago now awaits the hangman's noose for his participation in a crime which was not merely an attempt, but resulted in the murder of two inoffensive people.

Salem, Sept. 30.—The first duplicate county tax roll to be received by the secretary of state this year is that of Lake county, filed to-day. The summary shows a total taxable property of $1,330,988 31; number of polls, 477. This is a decrease of $300,000 from last year; the difference being for the most part in sheep and cattle.

A Busy Life.

Mr. B. Shepherd Wall, the young man whose ambition to wear all the good clothes in Washington proved his downfall, was the object of a good deal of interest at the Langham, where he boarded. His occupation was a matter of some curiosity, and one of the guests one day inquired of the elevator boy:

"What does that young man do?"

"Deed, boss," was the reply, "he doan do nuffin' but change his clos."—Washington Post.

Clergymen's Attire.

It is surprising how the fashion among ministers of religion of wearing a distinctive dress is dying out. A few years ago nearly every minister wore a white necktie, a vest buttoned close up to the throat and a coat of similar peculiarity. Now all is changed. The white tie has long since lost its clerical mark, and when a minister wears a coat of the kind that used to be his exclusive property he rather makes himself conspicuous by it than otherwise. In a city of conventions like St. Louis a change of fashion like this is very conspicuous. I can remember the time when a religious conference brought here a crowd of delegates whose profession was as plainly defined by their garb as if each wore a surplice or gown. Now ministers dress very much like business men do, with perhaps a little more preference for black; but each pleases himself as to cut and style.—Interview in St. Louis Letter.
