Wester The Accident occurred.

The train was in tunnel 14, only the last half of the last Pullman car remaining outside when the Miller-hook connecting the mail and express cars broke. The automatic air brakes having been thus separated from the engine clasped themselves fast to the wheels of the train and held her. The double-header backed up the mail car and it was tastened to the express car with a chain. The engines started to pull the train through thus but the train proved too heavy and it broke loose. The engines were backed up again for another trial.

The big engines, loaded with pine wood fuel, were well-filled for the active service required on the mountain grade and were all this time confined in the damp, leaky, constantly water-soaked and crooked tunnel, filling the already foul air with fumes from the great voliron horses. The smoke and air becoming disagreeable to those in the cabs of the engines, Conductor Morgan, who was up near the engines, told the engineers to back the train out. Engineer Church did so. When the train was about ready tunnel, it was discovered that there was nobody in the cab of the first engine, the throttle of which was in the middle notch, Rochford was dead when found. The bodies were immediately removed from the tunnel, and the work of resuscitating Fitepatrick, who was almost dead, began. Rockford's engine did not answer Church's signals to back out, and it is thought that Rochford and Fitzpatrick, after being nearly suffocated got down from their engine to walk out of south end of tunnel, when they were overcome and fell. St. Paul, July 25.-The promoters of the great farmers' wheat corner in Minnesota are in a mild state of consternation tonight over the prospect of prosecution on the charge of criminal conspiracy.

While a member of the lower house the Minnesota legislature in 1887 Igna-tius Donnelly, now president of the Farmers' Alliance of this state, secured he passage of a constitutional amend ment, which was adopted by the people in the fall of 1888. It is now section 35 of article 4 of the state constitution and reads as follows:

individual or members or officers of any corporation, to monopolize the markets for food products in this state, or to interfere with or restrict the freedom of such markets, is hereby declared to be a criminal conspirator, and shall be pun-ished in such a manner as the legislature may provide.

All action taken under the now famous Mullar circular comes plainly under this law. President Donnelly admitted that a line of conduct which, when pursued by the members of the Chicago Board of Trade, is a criminal consultation.

They, however, expressed the belief that a valuable quality of the rock would be found by following up the various leads. Until recently nothing more was done.

Late in 1890 George Baccon, an agent for asbestos paints, saw a specimen of the rock, probably in the cabinet of Herman Helms, of Jacksonville. On inquiry he learned of its source and, in company with Frank Bybee, he went to Mr. Reynolds' family to show him an asbestos prospect. They at once posted notices on two claims. Soon after this Mr. Baccon showed samples of the rock to Captain Tyler, of Forest Grove, Or. Arrangements were at once made for the rock to Captain Tyler, of Forest Grove, Or. Arrangements were at once made for mining of a few hundred pounds of the rock for inspection by a representative of a New York manufactory. The rock obtained was not satisfactory to this critical English gentleman, who hotly charged the parties interested with unfair dealing. This stirred Captain Tyler's blood and he captains ties interested with unfair dealing. This stirred Captain Tyler's blood and he came here himself. He was soon satisfied that spinning asbestos exists here in probably paying quantities. By his efforts the Puget Sound Asbestos Company became interested in the find. The members of the company at once filed a number of claims, covering over 500 acres. This was the signal for a rush.
