Senator Puffer in Texas.

Sulphur Springs (Texas), July 29.—Senator Puffer was the orator at the Farmers' Lyceum here last night. More than 4000 people were present to hear the Kansas senator. He wanted the government to loan the people money at 1 per cent to lift the cotton crop. He proposed to pull the teeth and close the mouth of the great red dragon in Wall street. He proposed to do this with flat money instead of bonds. He wanted to mortgage their homes. His speech lasted two hours and he closed by saying that the People's party would finally elect the president and the senate, and if the supreme court was not with them they would make another.

Was It a Big Sea Turtle?

Captain Edward Reeve has the credit to light the beacon on the break water near Oregon. Monday, while pulling leisurely toward the breakwater, he was attracted by a commotion in the water near him. He rested on his oars and looked to see what it was. His eyes were fixed on the hard black back of a monster sea turtle. A moment later he saw the head and eyes of the strange object. As the head protruded, above the surface the flapping of the monster's long flippers. The head of the marine animal was covered with protruding horns.

The monster came toward the boat and apparently meditated an attack. Reeve and his crew were in a panic. It paid no attention to this assault, but ran his head against the boat with a force that caused the skiff to keel over. The captain weighed over 200 pounds, and managed to keep the boat right side up. Then the fight became fierce. The tide was carrying the contestants toward the breakwater. One after the other the oars were broken by the captain by striking on the hard back of the monster. Finally, without anything to defend himself, the captain managed to throw a noose over a projecting rock on the breakwater and so pulled himself ashore.

The monster continued its attacks on the boat, and remained in the vicinity for some time after the boat had been drawn up out of the way. When last seen the ferocious marine monster was charging the water into the sea as it sped off toward Gardner's Island. The captain puts the monster down as a sea turtle, but of enormous size.—Boston Herald.

An American Mail.

The White Star liner Majestic arrived at Queenstown from New York with an extraordinarily large mail, which comprised 800 sacks of English, Scotch, Irish and Continental letters, weighing in the aggregate thirty-five tons. All of these were landed at Queenstown. This is the heaviest mail ever brought across the Atlantic by any one steamer. The numerous sacks were promptly packed into a special train, which consisted of post-coaches, tenders and a van. A double staff of letter sorters, twenty-two in number, accompanied the mail to Dublin, so as to be able to cope with the exigencies of the case. This mail shows the intercourse between the two countries at the end of April, 1891. During the same month many other fast English ships passed out, and American mails arrived.—Leisure Hour.

Gardner, hardware merchant, same town, says: "Electric Bitters is just the thing for a man who is all run down and don't care whether he lives or dies; he found new strength, good appetite and felt just like he had a new lease on life. AGRICULTURAL COLUMN.

The Extirpation of Forests Will Be Complete Unless Something Is Done Soon—Upon Trees Depend the Welfare and Prosperity of the Country—The People Should Take This Matter Up.

Every thinking man knows that the forests are the protection of the country. Mountains covered with forests and verdure store up water for commerce and irrigation and charge the air of the valleys and plains with moisture, while bare mountains ruin everything below and near them.

Several governments of Europe have been for years conserving and caring for their forests and constantly extending their area. They find it pays as a business investment though money making was not the motive in the measure. The rulers realized that forests were an absolute necessity to the future value of the country as a home for the people.

Forests are as necessary as water and sunlight. They realized that a country in which forests are cut off the original condition is utterly denuded would become an uninhabitable desert.

Forestry consists in part of thinning out the natural tree growth, saving the best trees and planting wherever there is room of the best species adapted to the climate. Propagating young trees and their culture before and after planting in forest. Cut the mature timber at the time and age when it is of the greatest value. Then plant fifty young trees in the space occupied by the tree cut and then gradually thin them out as they become of value and leave one or two to mature. All rough, steep, stony, unproductive lands and ravines should be planted with the most valuable trees adapted to that section. Prussia and Russia have many practical and technical forestry schools in which every branch of the science is taught and found to pay well simply as a business venture. An immense revenue is derived from otherwise worthless land.

In some instances it has been found profitable to encroach on lands suited to other purposes. The benefits accruing to the adjacent lands, climate and crops are many.

Anyone posted in forestry knows that there are few places on this earth so barren as a tree of some kind will not grow. The great Sahara desert could be changed into a forest by proper steps. California's Mojave desert could be made one of the most valuable areas on the globe by tree planting. The black, arid, food producing mountains of Southern California, Arizona and Nevada could be converted into timber tracts of inestimable value in themselves. The adjacent valleys would be benefited beyond comprehension. Broad, open forest covered valleys may properly be denuded. Hills and mountains never.

These should be held in sacred trust by the general state governments. Unproductive land should be planted and cared for so as not to be ravaged by fire. All pastures should be strictly prohibited. The wild animals and fishes should be protected. New species should be introduced and kept as an heritage for future generations.

Look at the redwood—the grandest timber tree of the whole earth. Twenty-five to fifty years hence they will have from her people. The woman in which strong even in danger, must have prompted her to leave the palace with her beautiful black hair streaming over her shoulders. It is difficult to compute the influence of those raven tresses, and the potency of the spectacle of beauty in distress.—New York Sun.

Remarkable Rescue.

Mrs. Michael Curtin, Plainfield, Ill. makes the statement that she caught cold for a month by her family physician, but grew worse. He told her she was a hopeless victim of consumption and that no medicine could cure her. Her druggist suggested Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, she bought a bottle and to her delight found herself benefited from first dose. She continued to take it until she was able to resume her usual work. She now does her own housework and is able to care for her family. Venerable Church Dignitaries.

Several prelates of the Episcopal church in the United States are quite old men. Bishop Huntington is 72. Bishop Clark, the acting diocesan in Massachusetts, is over eighty. Bishop Cox is several years beyond three score and ten and is still a vigorous man. Bishop Williams, of Connecticut, the present primate of the Episcopal church, is very nearly seventy-five. Bishop Littlejohn, of Long Island, is not far from seventy.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has decided to make it known to his suffering fellow-men. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, he will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this receipt, in German, French or English, for full particulars for preparing and using. Send by mail, or by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. NOYES, 239 Fowlers' Block, Rochester, N. Y.
