AUTHORITIES DISAGREE.

Difference of Opinion Regarding Sprays and Washes.

In recent editions of this paper were published lectures on orchard insects and horticulture delivered at Stanford University by the most eminent specialists of the country. We published those lectures as the views of authorities on these questions so important to orchardists. Professor J. B. Comstock is a recognized authority of this country on matters pertaining to what we call scale bugs or bark lice. He is thoroughly posted on the economic side of entomology. He may not have the practical knowledge on the subject that they have who are constantly observing and conducting in the orchard and garden.

He could not go into minute detail, but that is necessary in taking care of orchards in a short lecture. Some things of seeming unimportance are of the most value to the practical orchardist. Many of the most valuable little details were, perhaps, left out of his lecture, as he pointed out. Mention was omitted of the best and surest means of freeing orchards of insect pests. Namely, the introduction of parasitic and cannibalistic insects, which special office is to feed upon the noxious insects. It is unfortunately true that in our efforts to destroy scale bugs by washes and sprays and by fumigation, the most perfect of all known means, we have been killing only a small percentage of the scale bugs and at the same time every one of the parasitic insects. With washes we drive from the orchard the insect eaters such as ladybugs, soldier beetles, etc. Fumigation kills all insects except a few of the scale. I believe there is no case on record of killing all the scale bugs in an orchard even by the most perfect fumigation.

Professor Comstock gives as the opinion that the best of the winter washes is the resinous wash, especially on deciduous trees. He is right in saying this wash will come nearer destroying all scale bugs than any other. I do not agree with his recommendation.

The lime, sulphur and salt compound is nearly its equal for scale and its effect in destroying the germs of many of the most serious forms of fungal diseases most valuable. Another important point left out is that these washes for the destruction of scale bugs should be applied in autumn just as soon as the leaves are off the trees, for then the scale are young and tender and easier to kill. Existing in this region with any of these washes. Why? Because the natural enemies of the scale bugs are destroying every species of injurious bug. Professor Comstock does not advise spraying if you are aware of the existing scale. We should know when to spray as well as how.

A Strange Freak.

The wife of our esteemed citizen, Mr. John Rowell, while suffering under a severe attack of the influenza, was overcome by a sudden and unexpected stroke of apoplexy, which was prevented by the opportune arrival of a neighbor. Her case has been considered by the physicians incurable, but her husband was highly pleased, after using a course of Sulphur Bitters, to find that she was entirely cured.—Kingston Herald.

How It Feels to Have a Lion Bite You.

Mr. Laverly, a member of the Bombay bar, says: "So large an animal as a lion coming at full speed against you of course knocks you off your legs. The claws and teeth entering the flesh do not hurt so much as you would think. The only really painful part of the business is the squeeze given by the jaws on the bone. Right none of the dreamy stupor Livingston describes, but the contrary felt as usual. I adopted the course of lying quiet still, which I believe is the best thing one can do, and you are quite helpless with a heavy animal on you, and they are inclined to make grabs at everything that moves, and the fewer bites you can get off with the better."

"All the wounds are centers of inflammation, and blood poisoning, and the more you get the less chance you have. The power of the lion's jaws may be inferred from the fact that the lioness that seized me, although it had a broken jaw, scored deep cuts on my forearms with its teeth. Some claw wounds were mere scratches, which I attribute to the fact that they clutched at the surface of my coat, thinking it was a snake, and when they saw the flesh they pretty late. In fact, my coat was torn in some places without any corresponding wound beneath."

"I never felt the slightest shock. Tigers and panthers, as a rule, immediately leave you one they seize in a charge, but this lioness, having let me, went a few yards to roar at my men, returned, and stood over me growling, and then bit my arm. I got no bite the first go off, as she was occupied in biting the side."—London Times.

Women Being Recognized in London.

Women are fast obtaining substantial recognition in the governing of London. There are women members of the board of education and various other important bodies, and if women choose there may now be women dock commissioners. In a bill before parliament dealing with the election of dock commissioners, Mr. Courtney, chairman of the committee, took a novel and, as the newspapers describe it, "praiseworthy" step by striking out the words "male persons," so that the franchise might be conferred on ladies. The promoters of the bill said if ladies might vote they might also become commissioners. "And why not," asked Mr. Courtney, "if they are good business women?"—London Letter.

A Fast Growing Vine.

The Kudzu vine is probably the most rapid growing plant in the world. It belongs to the bean family. The leaves look something like a Lima bean, and was once called Dolichos japonicus. It will grow easily sixty feet in three months. It was introduced into America by the Japanese during the Centennial exhibition. It is said that in its own country it has flowers like bunches of wisteria. For some reason American summer do not seem long enough for it. It rarely blooms.—Mechan's Monthly.

A Beautiful Effect in Mahogany.

The Way of the World.

Funny world we live in. A man who has six horses standing idle in a stable walked two miles out in the country on a little matter of business a day or two ago, while another man who had no horses and very little money hired a team to go the same distance. This was an actual occurrence this week, and shows two ways of business a day or two ago. He who has the facilities for driving prefers to walk, while he who could much better prefer to walk and has no team, goes and hires one. Men are crazy to own a team, and it soon becomes a bore to give the horse necessary exercise. It has always been thus, and we presume always will be.—Westchester Record.

A man who has six horses standing idle in a stable walked two miles out in the country on a little matter of business a day or two ago, while another man who had no horses and very little money hired a team to go the same distance. This was an actual occurrence this week, and shows two ways of business a day or two ago. He who has the facilities for driving prefers to walk, while he who could much better prefer to walk and has no team, goes and hires one. Men are crazy to own a team, and it soon becomes a bore to give the horse necessary exercise. It has always been thus, and we presume always will be.—Westchester Record.

Women Being Recognized in London.

Women are fast obtaining substantial recognition in the governing of London. There are women members of the board of education and various other important bodies, and if women choose there may now be women dock commissioners. In a bill before parliament dealing with the election of dock commissioners, Mr. Courtney, chairman of the committee, took a novel and, as the newspapers describe it, "praiseworthy" step by striking out the words "male persons," so that the franchise might be conferred on ladies. The promoters of the bill said if ladies might vote they might also become commissioners. "And why not," asked Mr. Courtney, "if they are good business women?"—London Letter.

A Fast Growing Vine.

The Kudzu vine is probably the most rapid growing plant in the world. It belongs to the bean family. The leaves look something like a Lima bean, and was once called Dolichos japonicus. It will grow easily sixty feet in three months. It was introduced into America by the Japanese during the Centennial exhibition. It is said that in its own country it has flowers like bunches of wisteria. For some reason American summer do not seem long enough for it. It rarely blooms.—Mechan's Monthly.

A Beautiful Effect in Mahogany.

The Way of the World.

Funny world we live in. A man who has six horses standing idle in a stable walked two miles out in the country on a little matter of business a day or two ago, while another man who had no horses and very little money hired a team to go the same distance.
