FLOW ON, SWIFT STREAM.

Flow on, swift stream, amid the flowers, Flow on and dance with joy, And tell me of the happy hours When I was yet a boy I watched thee with the loved ones then. Now all alone I come again To wander by the river; And I am old and they are gone,

But it unchanged is gliding on As young and bright as ever. Unchanged it seems, yet who can stay The water's ceaseless motion? The little waves of yesterday Today have reached the ocean Unmarked, unmissed, they swiftly fly, Unmarked, unmissed, we, too, must die

And leave the mighty river, Where youth and joy and love and strife,

And all the various modes of life, Flow on unchanged forever. —W. E. H. Lecky in London Spectator.

That morning the father had spoken to Jennie of a young farmer, whom he termed a "likely catch." She had expressed her opinion of him in so decided a way as to alarm Mr. Olcott for the safety of his much prized authority. He was wont to speak of himself as a marvelous example of the patriarch.
"Make 'em mind," he would say. "Keep yer household beneath your feet; govern 'em well, an they'll git along."

Jennie's boldness in opposing his judgment so stupefied him that his anger had not yet had time to blaze forth, but Mrs. her husband had left the kitchen she pleaded with the girl to "give in." Jennie had been very thoughtful during the

Mrs. Kate Calding was the only one in the world who ever did understand her brother Hiram, and she had planned a clever little ruse to be played on the insuspecting farmer.

Mr. Bryan, whom Jennie had condeal for, was well suited to her. He had not yet declared his love, but it was not nounced his case to be Consumption and upgnessed by the shrewd little maiden.
To Mrs. Calding, however, he had opened his heart, and she bade him wait not conducted by himself, and rightly concluded that he might put serious difficulty in the way of the young people.

After satisfying herself that the name of Jennie's lover was quite unknown to her brother, she resolved to introduce him as a young man who would be a good match for Jennie, if only the girl would be wise enough to think so. Allowing him to believe they had never met, she trusted to his unequaled obstinacy to do the rest.

"I've wanted so much to talk with you about Jennie," said the lady, as she and Hiram sat in her well appointed dining room the night of the arrival. "Yes, and I'm willin. She ought to be settled," said the old man decidedly.

"It does not do, Hiram," began Mrs. an you'll jest hev to give in; no use Calding, watching the hard lined face talkin at him. "T only make him wass." intently, "to depend on a girl's choice, and his future wife must be buried, and "Well, I guess it don't," he interrupted with a sneer.
