Star Route Cases.

Washington dispatch.]

Six cases in which Monroe Salisbury, the famous star route contractor, was interested, were decided against him today. The United States began suit in the court for the northern district of California against him individually in five cases, and against him and George H. Pratt in another case to recover moneys paid them on their postal contracts. The complaints were thrown out by the court below on demurrer, which claimed that they did not contain sufficient facts to establish a cause of action, from which judgement the United States appealed. Justice Harlan, speaking for the court, said that they were of the opinion that the complaints did set forth facts sufficient to warrant the bringing of the suit. The judgement of the court below was, therefore, reversed, and the cases remanded, with instructions to overrule the demurrers and cause the defendants to answer.

At the beginning of the new year forgive all who have wronged you and let them take their own road to ruin. They will go there fast enough if they really are as mean as they seem to you. But love all your friends the more. Genuine affection and good will are the scarcest commodities in the world, scarcer even than money and more to be prized. The world is languishing and dying for them.

An Interesting School Meeting

Monday's school meeting to elect a director to succeed W. A. Patrick was a very spicy affair. While Robert Taylor was invoicing the Crocker Grocery store his friends put up a job on him and elected him director for three years on the second ballot he receiving 56 votes to E. D. Briggs' 45. Mr. Taylor is one of the proprietors of the High & Taylor liquor saloon and Tammany hall political junkshop, and the issue of the election turned on the question of what kind of member of the bar you wanted for school director, one who tended the bar in front or one who attended it behind, and the man behind the bar was chosen. In some quarters the election of a saloon keeper school director has stirred up as much comment as the appointment of Mose Gunst in San Francisco.

No one denies Mr. Taylor's ability or efficiency and his election for this peculiar position demonstrates his popularity. He was placed in nomination by W. W. Kentnor, one of the leading members of the Presbyterian church, and was supported and elected by the most influential citizens of Ashland. People are somewhat amazed nevertheless.

Taylor's associates on the board are F. H. Carter vice-president of the bank of Ashland, and Mrs. D. E. Hyde, the mother and main support of the W. C. T. U. in Ashland and president of the Jackson county union. This "triple alliance" of the "liquor ring" the "bank-ring" and the "prohi ring" represents about the main factions in the community and in a measure forms a triumvirate hard to beat—money, water and whisky.

There are 761 children of school age in the district. The past year there was received from all sources $8,108, and $8,044 disbursed.

A Proposed New Railroad.

The Yreka Journal conducts a transcontinental railroad through this section thus:

The Great Northern railroad, crossing the continent near the Canadian boundary, and the formidable rival of the other continental roads, may yet be continued on to San Francisco, as its officers and managers seem to be very enterprising men. It is likely an investigation of the route from Walla Walla to Northern California will be made, so as to strike Klamath Lake basin in Southern Oregon and Siskiyou county, in California, entering the low valleys between Mount Shasta and the Siskiyou range of Mountains. It is believed a railroad could be extended through Scott valley, towards Salmon river by tunneling Salmon mountain with a two mile tunnel, to escape the snow line, thence direct to Orleans Bar, a distance of less than 100 miles from Yreka, and not more than 180 or 190 miles from Yreka to Eureka. Besides covering a large extent of new country. The road would be the shortest of any route to the East, or not any longer than the Central Pacific route, a much easier grade and but little snow to encounter. Some portions of this road might not be available for much business, except in securing an abundance of timber, but railroads everywhere are built through sections of but little profit, as the cheapest, most convenient, shortest and easiest to manage. In reaching this section, the road might come down the Klamath to Pokegama, from Oregon or into the Butte Creek section.

E. A. Sherwin the druggist desires us to publish the following extract from a letter of Chas. M. Gutfeld, of Reedley, Fresno Co., Cal., as they handle the remedy referred to and want their customers to know what a splendid medicine it is:

"It is with pleasure I tell you that by one day's use of Chamberlain's Cough remedy I was relieved of a very severe cold. My head was completely stopped up and I could not sleep at night. I can recommend this remedy." A cold nearly always starts in the head and afterwards extends to the throat and lungs. By using this remedy freely as soon as the cold has been contracted it will cure the cold at once and prevent it from extending to the lungs.

Dispatches from Cuba are contradictory. It appears to be the fact that Matanzas and Santiago de Cuba have been declared in a state of war and that pardon has been offered all insurgents who submit within eight days. Manuel Garcia is dead, having been shot in the first engagement, near Aquacate. The report that Marti and Gomez have landed in Cuba is now denied. The truth will not be learned in some days, possibly. Key West (Fla.) is filled with Cubans and the Cuban flag flies over many buildings. A filibustering expedition is possible. It is proposed to raise a fund with which to purchase enough food for the stock, the same to be distributed by local committees duly organized and authorized in the various counties, the amounts given to each farmer to be paid for by his note, which will be a first lien on the crop. Committees will be appointed to take charge of the matter.

Economical Fuel.

An economical fuel can be made as follows: Small coal, charcoal or sawdust, 1 part; clay or loam, 1 part; sand or ashes, 2 parts, with enough water to make the mass into stiff balls. These should be placed upon an ordinary fire to a height which is slightly above the bars. They produce a heat considerably more intense than that emitted by ordinary fuel and effect a saving of one-half the ordinary quantity of coals, while a fire thus made up will require neither stirring nor fresh fuel for eight or ten hours.—New York Dispatch.

WHAT IS YOUR ROTATION?

Is It Adapted to Your Soil, Climate and Your Markets?

There is room for divergence of opinion as to what rotation is the most profitable, but in most sections good farmers have rotations especially adapted to their own farms. These may be short or long, and usually in any country or section the older the country the longer the rotation. Almost all farmers everywhere have a rotation such as this: Corn, and oats and then corn, or corn, oats and wheat, and then corn. Others again have corn, oats, wheat, meadow, pasture and then corn. In many sections of this country this is not a bad one, but a writer in the Iowa Homestead points out the fact that a rotation is not a good one unless it provides for the maintenance of soil fertility, and he knows of no country in which this has been done without the use of the legumes, such as clover, beans or peas. He says:

In sections where either fall or spring wheat grows well, and where stock growing and feeding is one of the main features of the farm, the rotation of corn on sod, oats, spring or fall wheat, clover and timothy for meadow, then pasture one to two years, and then back to corn, is a very desirable one. It provides in corn a hoed, or, we should rather say a cultivated, crop on land which has an abundance of vegetable matter in that state of decomposition in which the roots of corn luxuriate, and in the corn growing sections it is generally wise to follow corn with corn, thus securing two heavy crops from rich soil. Beyond this it is not wise to go, as the corn root worm will inevitably appear and decrease the crop in ordinary years from 10 to 25 per cent.

Oats can then be sown without plowing, and, as a rule, to better advantage without plowing than with it. Where wheat is a profitable crop in ordinary years, grass seed may then be sown, and if seed is not too high it will pay to sow it anyhow, even if it is to be plowed under in the fall for a crop of winter wheat. This, again, furnishes the best nurse crop for the grasses, insuring a stand in ordinary seasons, and the meadows treated in this way furnish an excellent crop of hay, and, if clover predominates, a crop of seed. Where timothy is not sown with clover it is best to go back to corn after a clover seed crop, thus making a short four years' rotation, but where there is no pasture except that furnished by fields in the rotation it is wise to sow timothy and pasture one or two years before going back to corn.

Exhibit of Irrigation Machinery.

The exhibit of machinery for raising water made at the irrigation convention in Hutchinson, Kan., demonstrated that at least in the Arkansas bottoms a big ditch full of water can be provided without very expensive appliances. Pumps were there each throwing 4,000 gallons of water per minute. These were each driven by a common thrasher's engine. There were also smaller machines doing proportionately heavy work. There were gasoline engines of several makes, all doing excellent work in the operation of pumps. Without doubt the use of these engines is to be greatly increased, where a supply of water is desired, without fail, at the time most needed, and where the quantity must be above the capacity of the windmill and below 10 or 15 horsepower. Windmills were there in great numbers and variety, and they received merited attention. The beginner at irrigation first thinks of the wind as the most desirable motive power, and there is no doubt about the practicability of irrigating considerable areas, and especially gardens, by the use of wind power.
